LOOK

at what we've improved

The year began with renovations and additions. Of the 109 computers delivered, 28 were added for the new Tech Prep program.

Ben Davis was one of seven schools in the state to test pilot this program.

"The equipment we're purchasing is more like the equipment used in the real world," said Tom Corwin, math department.

In addition, the science department received an electronic balance, temperature and PH probes, and a circuit board.

"I think that in the '90s, the computer will be seen as a tool to aid in the way we teach and in the way students learn," said Corwin. "But it will never take the place of the teacher."

Along with installment of computers, the walls, previously a solemn blue and a sickly yellow, were altered to hues of peach and lavender. Tall tan lockers now grace the halls where short, grey ones formerly stood. "I think colors enhance a person's learning ability. The brighter the color, the better the atmosphere," said James Granger, senior.

"I think it is a great improvement; it takes the drabness out," commented Linda Mock, AV specialist.

In addition to new "wall-wear," a new hall was added to make room for the larger-than-usual number of incoming sophomores. K-hall now harbors half of math, English, and the new Tech Prep program. Also, a pass-through was built, making travel easier to and from the foreign language classes. "Before the pass-through was built, students already upstairs, would have to go downstairs, then go all the way to downstairs F-hall, then upstairs again," said Bob McKinley, foreign language.

Faculty restrooms were added as well. "Many times teachers would have to leave the floor just to go to the bathroom. It was very inconvenient," said McKinley. This addition also made it possible for the foreign language department to cater to the handicapped students.

For improved attendance and higher ISTEP scores, Ben Davis received a check for $86,164.72 for its 1988-'89 school year performance. New assistant principal, Jerry Marlin, carried over the improved attendance.

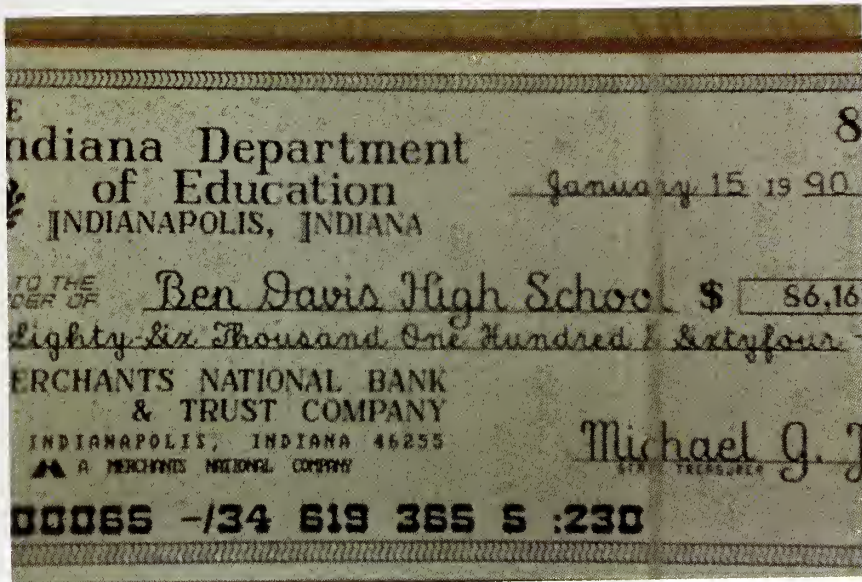

"We are in the process of helping young people to be more in tune with acceptable attendance," said Marlin, "for now, in school, and later, in the work place."

at what we've achieved

"We were extremely successful academically and athletically." These words rang true for Dr. James Mifflin when four students were named National Merit Scholars.

Seniors Jennifer Price, Jonathan Dworak, T.J. Tyson, and Brian Diewert were the four to qualify this year. "Some schools have no National Merit Scholars--but we have four!!" said Dr. Mifflin. Also, Dworak was named as the Ben Davis Indiana Academic All-Star.

Ben Davis also had the privilege of hosting this year's Academic Decathlon regional competition on Saturday, January 20. Nine students attended from each of 14 schools to compete in the ten categories.

Scholastically speaking, Senior Kim Likens received a $2,000 scholarship for her performance of a scene from "Little Footsteps." This performance was all a part of the competition for the Prelude Award that Likens won.

"I wasn't as nervous as I thought I'd be. Once I was in the finals, I knew I was home free," said Likens. "I didn't think I'd win or anything, so that's why I was so surprised when I did win."

Likens plans to use the money to attend Millikin Liberal Arts College in Decatur, Illinois. Ben Davis also received $500 for supporting the arts.

Results of teamwork were evident when the boys cross country team battled its way to a State championship, the first since 1961. Crediting teamwork, coach John Jarosinski said, "Everyone has a common goal. They run a lot harder when they know others are counting on them."

Topping all past records, the wrestling team advanced six wrestlers into State competition at Market Square Arena. "We had the best team in terms of number of championships," said coach Joe Virgin. Senior Sherman Woodard carried his 140 lb. weight class record of 34-0 to State, but lost in a close match, ending the season with the team's best record of 35-1.

With the Pike four-way tournament title, two county runner-ups, two Sectional wins and a Regional win under their belt, the girls basketball team closed the season with the knowledge that the 1989-'90 girls' basketball record was the best in Ben Davis history.

When looking at what we've got, evidence in 1989-90 proved once again that Ben Davis truly is a "first class" school with "first class" students.

Free Time

Never a Dull Moment

Be it Noble Romans after a basketball game or that super-groovy date for Prom, there is always one key element that high school students are left with in the end, and that is memories.

"Just being at Ben Davis has created more than enough memories for me," said Mark Keller, junior. "This is, without a doubt, the best school around."

On March 10, Seniors Dan Bain and Chad Brady went "psychedelic" on WBDG. Six hours were devoted entirely to 60s and 70s music.

"Chad and I wanted to entertain those people and hopefully convert some people who didn't listen to it," said Bain. Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin and the Sly & the Family Stone, as well as other groovy artists all jammed their six hours worth.

Psychedelically speaking, students dug up the "far-out" 60s gear, in spirit of Winter Homecoming.

"I bought an entire outfit, tie and disco shirt included, at Goodwill for only $1.80," said Jason Sellars, junior.

While some students came to school clad in mom and dad's high school threads, others chose to be particularly festive on sunglasses and hat day, both normally, being against the school's dress code.

Although the concept of Winter Homecoming hadn't been in existence since 1987, the tradition was brought back to BD. Twelve organizations participated in the float contest.

The Valentine's and football Homecoming dances brought more than just a few to bop the night away.

Like tradition, seniors claimed the powderpuff title once again. However, this year some players left the field with the impression that the game's intent was to kill rather than to thrill.

"It seemed like we were concentrating on killing each other, instead of having a good time," said Missy Marcum, junior.

One group that won't be duking it out is Mask & Gavel. The student directed acting group produced two shows this year, Our Town, and Damn Yankees.

"By participating in special activities, it gives people the feeling that they have done something significant in their lives," said Michelle Brill, senior.

A Classical Evening

The whole month of October was very busy for Ben Davis students getting ready for Homecoming and Spirit Week.

The week before Homecoming, Ben Davis had various days in which the students would wear, say or do certain things that had to do with Spirit Week.

Each day there was a different theme. Monday was sucker day, Tuesday was hat day, Wednesday was jersey day, Thursday was dog collar day, and Friday was the day to get psyched up for the big game.

Even though the Giants lost to Carmel 35-20, the students still had the Homecoming dance to look forward to the next night, in the cafeteria.

Attending the dance as friends, Senior Julie Piatt, said,

"I think it's better to go as friends because then you can have more fun without worrying about things. You can just be yourself and have a good time."

"Homecoming was a chance for the whole school to get together and support the team. It's as if we were one big family. I love unity."

Dan Bain, senior

"The pressure is not there when your date drops you off after the dance to give him a good night kiss. You can thank him for a fun evening and leave," said Stefani Burch, senior.

Some believe it's better to go with someone a student really cares about. "It's more fun to go with someone you really enjoy spending time with," said Curt Helmerick, senior who attended the dance with his girlfriend junior Jolie Downs.

"If you have a long term relationship, it's better to go with them rather than a friend. Most of the time you know more about them then you do a friend. Friends don't talk as deep as boyfriend and girlfriend," said Senior Ken Saunders.

What about those who didn't have dates? Seniors David Crawford and Derek Means attended the Homecoming dance dateless this year. "It's not that we couldn't get dates; we just didn't. We had a lot of fun, but didn't feel obligated to anyone," stated Means.

Enjoying Life to the Fullest

After ten weeks of rehearsal for each production, Thornton Wilder's play "Our Town" and George Abbott and Douglass Wallop's musical, "Damn Yankees" were performed by Mask & Gavel and Thespian members.

The students believe that all the hard work paid off in the end. "I think we performed well and entertained the audience," said Christy Croxall, senior who performed in both casts.

Chris Walden, senior, said, "What I enjoyed about 'Our Town' the most was getting to know new people and make new friendships."

In addition, Crystal Martin, sophomore, said, "I think one of the most important things I learned was how to speak clearly with correct diction."

Mrs. Webb, played by Senior Jennifer McQueen, learned motherhood traits. "I didn't know how to cook, until Mr. Hughes taught me how to at least make it look like I was cooking."

"The most unique thing about 'Our Town' was that they were remodeling the auditorium, while we were trying to practice," said Bob Hughes, director.

"Our Town" was different than most productions. With "Our Town" no formal set was needed. On the other hand, the musical, "Damn Yankees" demanded one of Mask & Gavel's most elaborate sets. Intricate detail was added to the wood work.

"Having only a handful of people to help build the set made it extremely difficult," said Senior Brad Barnhill.

"Damn Yankees" was about a man wanting to become a great baseball hero, even though he was too old. The man's favorite team, the Washington Senators, was in seventh place but couldn't beat the New York Yankees.

In exchange for a promise to be young again and possibly help the team win the pennant, Joe decided to sell his soul to the devil, Applegate. In the end, Joe decided that one should appreciate all of what one has in life.

Senior Jerry Nuckols, Mask & Gavel president, said, "The leadership I have had this year has been a unique experience. It's a shame more students cannot have this opportunity."

Winter Spirit

Giants Whip Quakers

With the return of Winter Homecoming, students, faculty, and 12 organizations expressed Giant spirit during the week of February 5 to 9. Sponsored by the athletic department, cheerleaders, and student council, the event hadn't taken place since 1987.

Colorful spirit days included college sweatshirt, Hawaiian, Woodstock, and, of course, purple and white days.

Stomping the Quakers by a score of 76-44 made another spirited statement in itself.

Entertainment at halftime included a float parade and the naming of Mr. and Miss Giant. Selected by teachers,

Miss and Mr. Giant were seniors Sharie Sweet and Marc Dickison. The four underclass Giants were Sophomores

Donna Eddleman and Chris Ings, Juniors Krystie Cherry and Jon Deal.

Twelve organizations built floats. Cash awards and plaques were presented for the first, second, and third places. Seventy-five dollars was awarded to the basketball managers sponsored by Steve Witty and Terry Strahm, $50 to advanced physical education class sponsored by Dillow, and $25 to health occupations sponsored by Steve Witty and Terry Strahm.

Parties

A Time for Fun

After a long week of school and homework, students like to go out to wind down. Besides spending time at fast food restaurant hangouts, teenagers frequently search for a party.

People go to a party even if they don't know the person. Sophomore Maria Potts said, "People go for different reasons. Some go to party, and others go just to be there."

Student Venture hosted a Valentine's Day party which included an amazing date. There was a drawing to determine the winners. The date consisted of a carriage ride around downtown, a dinner for two, and a limo ride.

"At the Student Venture parties, you meet a lot of people who you would have never met," said Jennifer Hummer, junior. "You can be yourself, relax, and have fun."

"Student Venture is more than just fun-- you grow."

Jennifer Hummer, junior

"It's hard to take a lot of friends to your house," stated Angi Black, senior, "but with having restaurant hangouts across the street, it's much easier to eat and discuss the latest gossip."

Friday and Saturday are the busiest, Kevin Kelley, manager, said, "We make much of our business on game nights. After the games, the kids come to eat. We cater to the kids on the weekends, even though there are a lot of them who just hang around."

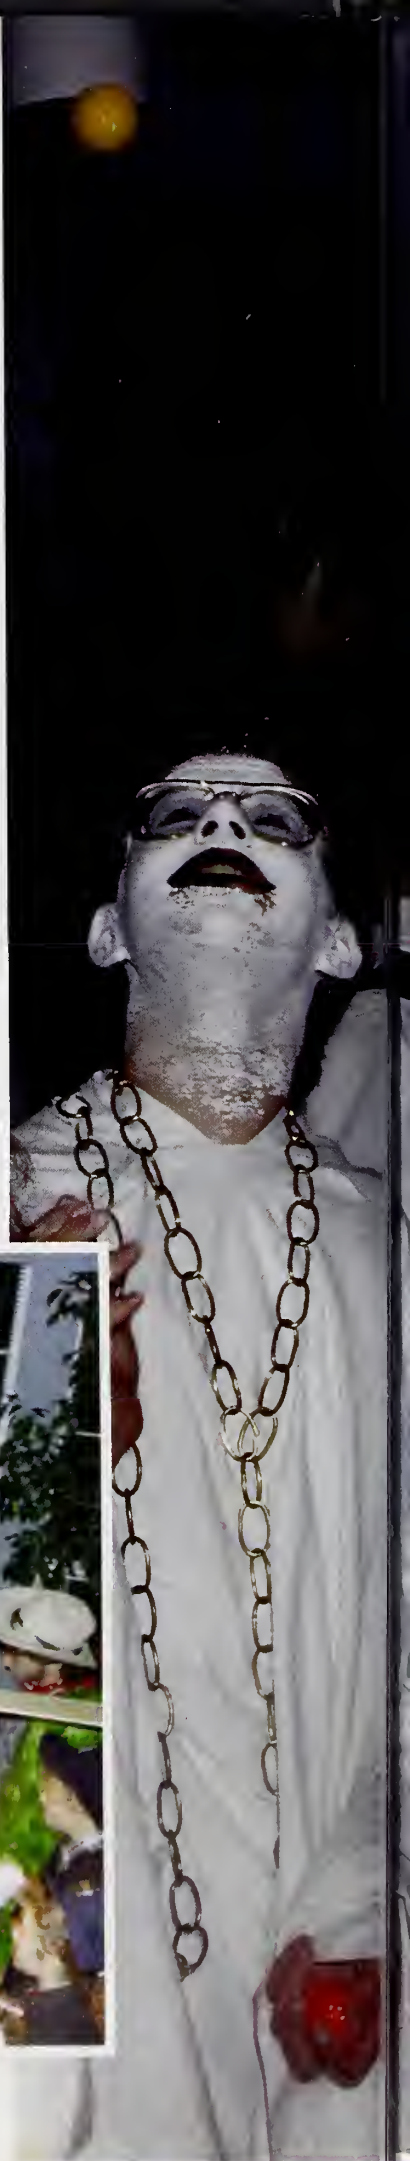

"I'm not really thrilled with the weekly routine of having a $2 charge to get into a restaurant, but they do give us coupons that make getting something to eat a lot more cheaper; so I suppose we'll keep paying," said Stefani Burch, senior.

Best Friends

Students and Pets

Whether a dog does tricks in Spanish, or a cat dances to the beat of pop music, pets become a vital part of a Ben Davis student's lives.

"Some pets do special and interesting things," said Amy Dornfeld, junior. "My very small and intelligent mutt does tricks in Spanish. If I say, 'Dame un beso', which means give me a kiss, she will come up to me and lick my face."

"My cat dances to her favorite pop music. She nods her head almost exactly to the beat," said Dawna Tidman, junior.

"Baby Doll, my cock-a-poo mutt, has a personality of her own. She is small and looks like an Ewok from 'The Return of the Jedi'," said Jennifer Caldwell, junior.

"While some students have their pets for fun or just for hanging around, many have pets for significant reasons," said Tidman. "I've had my cat for eleven years and it means a great deal to me, because I received her when my parents got divorced. She will always be special to me."

"I own a riding quarter-horse at Rainbow Stables," said Nicki Maple, junior, "I've had her for six years and I really find pleasure in riding her on warm summer evenings."

"Pebbles, my poodle, is my most loyal friend. It seems like she is always there when I need a comfort in bad times," said Jinaki Petty, senior.

"I don't find my pet hamster, Troy, as something to just have fun with, but I actually enjoy the responsibility that comes with having him around," said Dee Hilligoss, junior.

It is clear to see that a dog is more than a man's best friend and that a cat is more than a spoiled little baby. Pets are like human beings with their own personalities and vital characteristics.

"Pets are wonderful to have around and they are more faithful than humans; therefore, I love my Irish Setter, Cleo, and I wouldn't trade her for the world," said Cindy Fite, junior.

Young Hearts

Relieving Tension

Looking back at the era of watching cartoons, playing on the playground, and other fun kids stuff help relieve the everyday tension that faces today's teenager.

"Sometimes I like to just sit around to relieve the daily stresses of school and sports," said Sean Hartman, junior. "It makes me feel like I did when I was younger and didn't have to worry about anything."

One television cartoon that became a Sunday night favorite was The Simpsons.

"I haven't watched cartoons since I was little, but I have to be home by 8:30 to see Bart," said Brian Rabe, senior.

Bart Simpson, star of the animated series, is a true rebel. His favorite saying, "Don't have a cow man" became a popular one heard throughout the halls of Ben Davis. Also the show's teenage fans purchased posters, water bottles, and buttons of all sizes.

"Even though it's a cartoon, I get a chance to laugh like a kid and escape from

"I work so much that I barely have time to be a kid again. I miss being a kid, because there wasn't a care in the world."

Chris Monahan, senior reality," said John Davidson, senior.

Among the popular cartoon series, other opportunities helped students think back to their childhood memories to relax.

"I love to go to the park," said Jenny Orme, senior. "Sharing my memories with friends is refreshing."

Going out with friends provided some teenagers a distraction from some of their problems.

"Every Saturday night we went to the popular under 21 clubs to bust a move," said Tony Jones, senior. "I danced and it kept my mind off other things."

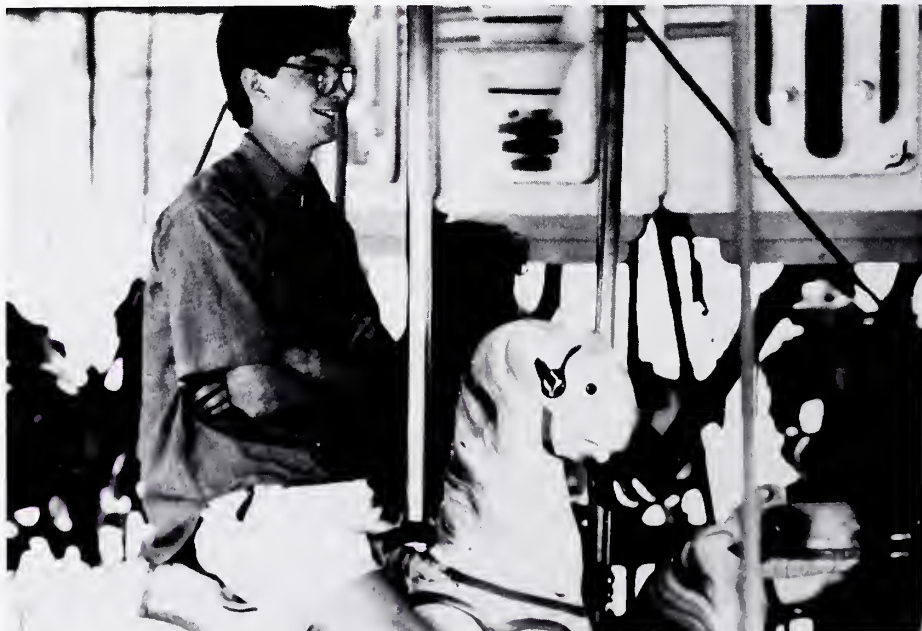

Whatever the occasion, students found time to flee from responsibilities that go along with being a teenager.

"Everyone is a kid inside," said Bryce Dininger, junior. "No matter what you have to do it's always good to go back and do some of the things you did when you were a kid."

Memories

All dressed up with somewhere to go, 472 couples arrived at the 500 Ballroom for the 1990 Prom. "Here and Now" played while Seniors Derek Wilham and Julie Piatt danced as king and queen.

Piatt said her most memorable moment about Prom was being crowned. "The week before Prom, I didn't think I would get it, but when Brad Butts called my name, I felt great. I will never forget the audience's applause and the dance with Derek," said Piatt.

The day after Prom, some students did other things with their friends. Some of the things that they did included going on picnics and recovering from a night full of events. As sort of a tradition, students went to King's Island for the day.

"I'll never forget my girlfriend giving me the silent treatment for making her ride King Cobra," said Jamie Chatham, senior.

"My date took me out to dinner, on a carriage ride, and provided an evening full of laughter."

Jamie Ashley, junior.

Memories that were formed will remain in the minds of students.

"I think I'll remember waiting in line for pictures," said Chris Wheat, senior.

Although Prom was expensive, students agreed that the evening was worth all the time and money.

Junior Sarah Bundy said a date's reaction to extravagance made it worth the time and effort. "It's worth it, when after buying the perfect dress, and getting your hair done, and making your makeup perfect, you walk out of your room to be greeted by your date who calls you 'beautiful'," Bundy said.

"Prom is something special that can't be measured by the amount of money you spend getting ready for it; it's measured by the memories and good times that you get out of it," said Jeremy Price, junior.

Feelings Can't Touch This

On June 1, when 760 seniors graduated, they ended high school educations and friendships to begin careers and lives of their own.

Preparation for graduation and events were costly. Senior David Hyne's parents spent nearly $300 for an open house party. "Also, I had to pay for the cap and gown, party supplies, invitations, film, and announcements," he said.

With a minimum capacity in the gymnasium, graduates received only six tickets. Senior Kimberly McNeil, said, "The hardest part was trying to decide who to give them to."

In addition to losing security of high school, students may put lifelong friendships on hold. Senior Class president Jeff Gradek spoke at about saying goodbye to teachers and friends.

...wall...quake

Without bad, there is no good. True in many cases, Tony Starks, social studies, believes in this cliché.

Starks visited San Francisco during his honeymoon only eight days after the 1989 San Francisco earthquake hit.

The quake caused the postponement of the World Series third game, which was played on the day of the quake, October 17, 1989. Because of the delay, Starks, an Oakland A's fan, witnessed the defeat of the San Francisco Giants by the Oakland A's. The game was at Candlestick Park, San Francisco.

"I really couldn't tell that there had been an earthquake. Construction was being done on some of the buildings that had been damaged; otherwise, it looked like regular roadside construction."

Starks said that even more surprising was the reaction of the San Francisco residents.

"Everyone acted like nothing had ever happened."

Even though the reactions were subtle, there was cause enough for great hysteria. For San Francisco, Tuesday, October 17, 1989, proved to be a fatal day: an earthquake hit Santa Cruz at 5:04 p.m., which measured 6.9 on the Richter scale, killing an estimated 100 people and injuring more than 3,000.

Although the earthquake lasted only 15 seconds, the damage was unbelievable. The double-decker I-880 Bay Bridge collapsed, sandwiching travelers and their vehicles between tons of concrete; fires roared long into the night due to exploded gas pipes; buildings crumbled to their bases, burying many alive.

According to Dr. Andy Barth, assistant professor of geology at IUPUI, the residents of Indianapolis need not worry about future earthquakes.

Barth said, "Indianapolis has only a 50 percent chance of a small earthquake hitting it within the next 10 to 20 years."

With the closing of one decade and the opening of another, change in modern history stunned the world—the crumbling of the Berlin Wall. It was a symbol that re-unification in Europe could be an immediate achievable goal.

Ambassador of the Federal Republic of Germany, Dr. Jürgen Ruhfus, summarized the German view of East-West relations in his speech to the Diplomatic Press Club on February 5, 1990.

"In the months ahead of us it is of decisive importance that we creatively and imaginatively manage the transition to a just and lasting order of peace in Europe, based on full respect for human rights, political freedoms of all individuals, and on the security of all states from threats of aggression or intimidation," he said.

President George Bush, in his speech in Maine in June of 1989, expressed the rest of the world's desire to have "a Europe whole and free."

Aside from the statements of world officials are the feelings of the citizens of a possible re-unified Europe.

Frank Zierenburg, BD exchange student from West Germany, said, "I was really disappointed at first, but then I thought, and I still do, that it is kind of neat to see the American perspective, which is probably more objective."

"When I go back to Germany," he added, "I will experience the German perspective, and the important time won't be over by then."

As for the future, Zierenburg believes that "unification will happen."

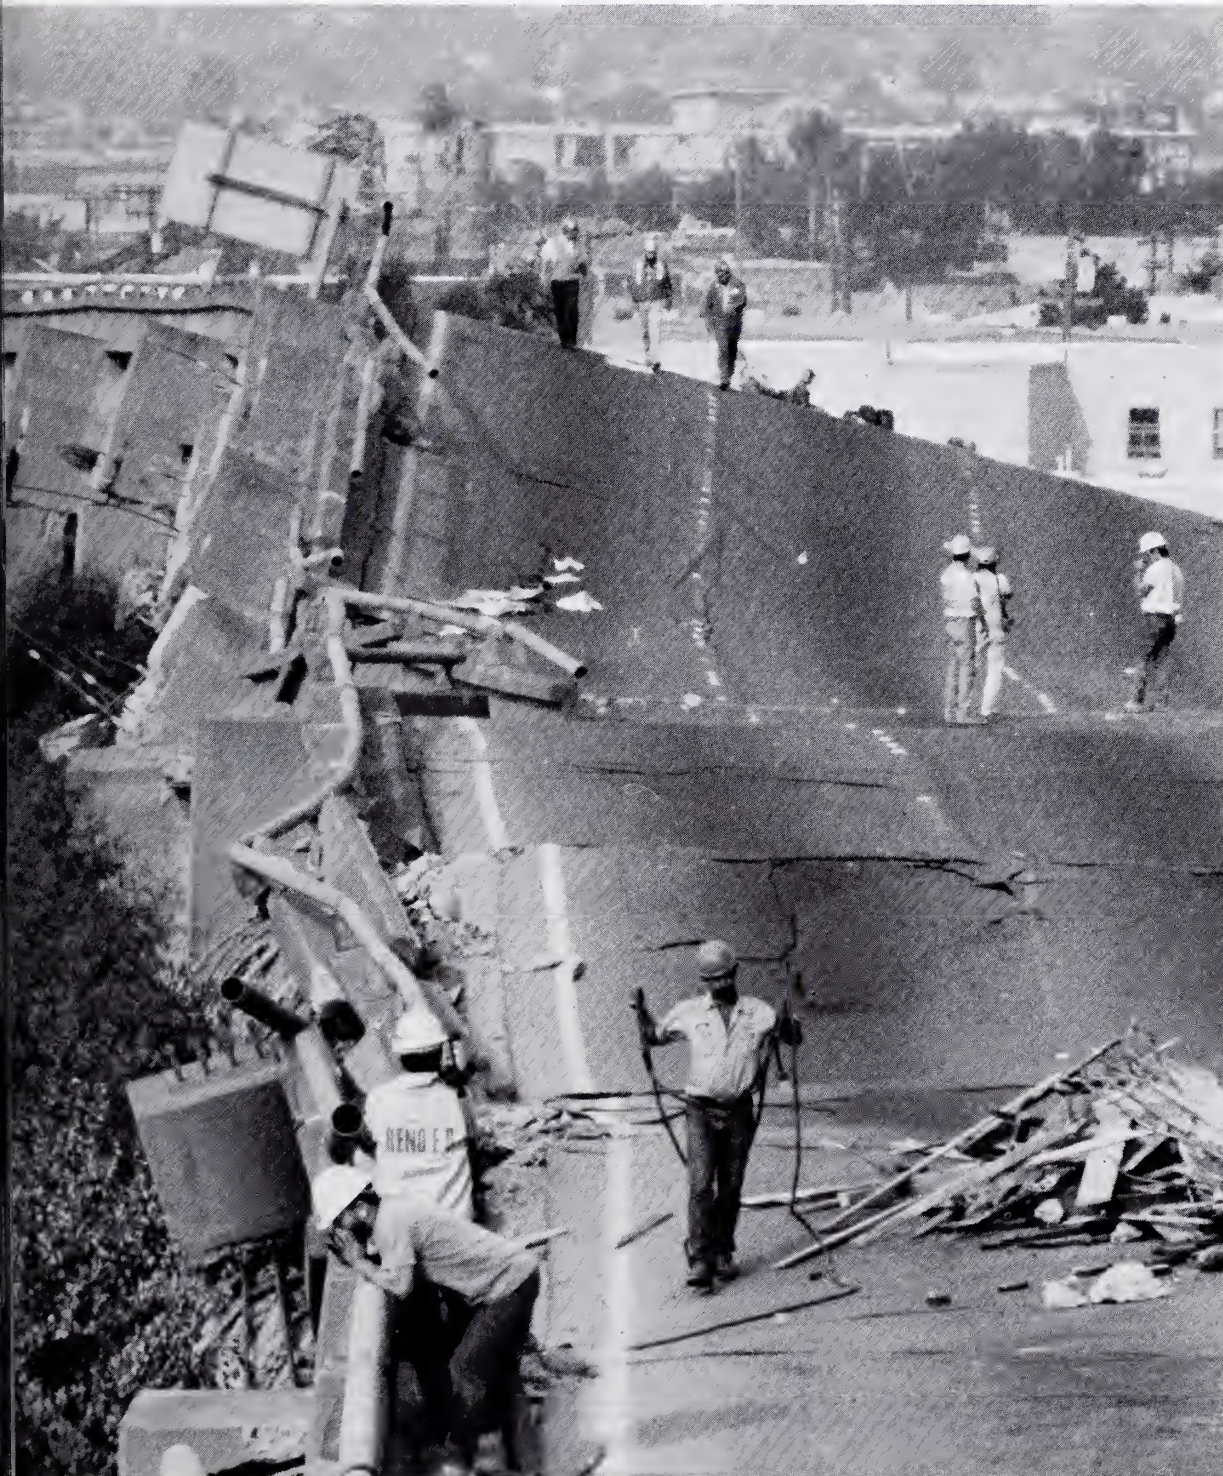

"Germans don't say re-unification because they don't want to make it like it was," he continued. "I think German politicians should treat the matter more calmly. That is, to 'sleep it over' before making definite decisions."

PEOPLE ...Bush...White

Even though Ryan White may be deceased, his memory will always live on. As a permanent reminder, on May 28 a 6 ft. 8 in. granite stone memorial was dedicated in Cicero where White is buried.

The story behind the teenage symbol of courage began in December 1984 when White was diagnosed as having Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome. White contracted it through a blood-clotting agent used to treat his hemophilia. White was only 13.

In 1985 White began his battle to be able to attend school. On November 1, 1985, the Indiana Department of Education ruled that, unless intensely ill, White should be allowed to attend school.

During his battle with AIDS, parents opposed White going to Western Middle School. Their appeal to court was overruled.

Due to all the problems White had in Kokomo, the Whites moved to Cicero. White was welcomed at Hamilton Heights High School.

To many, Ryan White was a symbol of courage. Lynn Miller, junior, said, "He stood up for what he believed in."

White's courage and his willingness to talk openly about his deadly disease soon made him a national celebrity.

He made public appearances to try to make people more informed about AIDS. He testified before the White House AIDS Commission, appeared on television, and visited with the Reagans.

Ryan's story was put into a movie in 1989. Judith Light played his mother, George C. Scott played the White's lawyer, and Lukas Haas portrayed Ryan. White played the role of a real-life friend who died of AIDS.

Of friends during his life, some were well-known like entertainers Michael Jackson and Elton John. Jackson gave White a new Mustang. John dedicated, "Candle in the Wind" to White at the fourth Farm Aid concert at the Dome.

On April 8, 1990, White died due to his respiratory infection. To say last goodbyes, friends and family gathered at White's funeral on stormy day, April 12.

Environmental programs characterized early 1990. included a visit from the President to Indiana soil. In April, George Bush launched Indiana's plan to improve air quality by planting the first of 30,000 trees downtown.

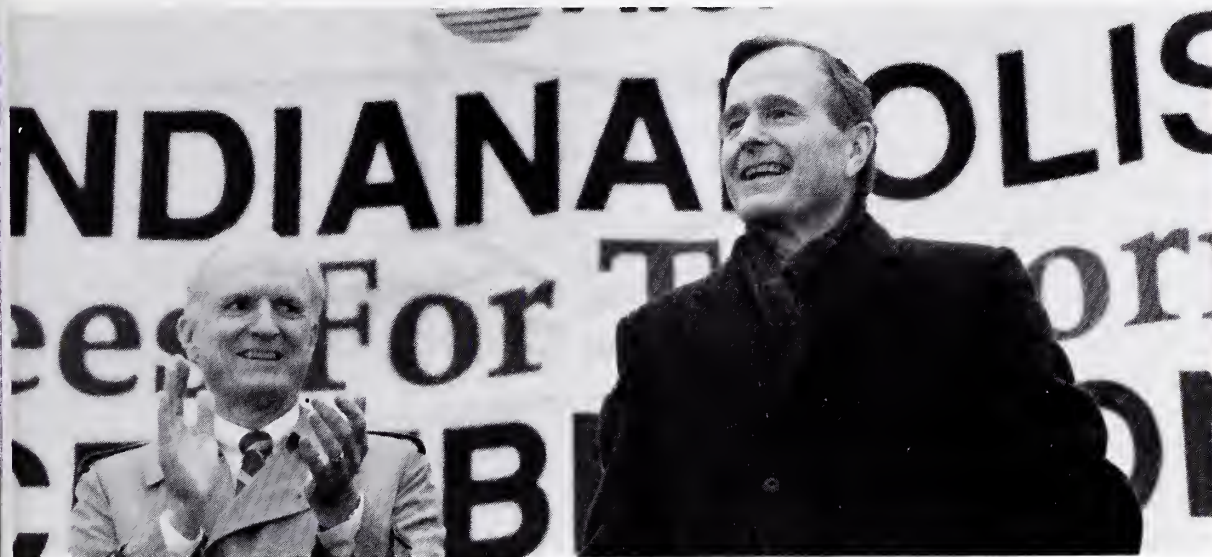

"Trees for Tomorrow" is an urban forestry program, the only of its kind in the nation, designed to plant 5000 trees on public property using existing city revenues.

At the ceremony, Mayor William Hudnuth said, "Across this great nation, the environment is becoming an increasingly important issue for all Americans. Clean air and water are no longer a luxury, but rather an essential aspect of the American quality of life. It's something we want to guarantee for future generations."

...Batman...Simpsons

This was the year of the fox, Fox Network that is. Channel 59 became the fastest growing network on television. Fox cornered the market with a menagerie of characters and entertaining shows.

The Simpsons, first appearing as a filler for The Tracy Ullman Show, is about a cartoon family that is very true to life. The cast includes Homer and Marge and their daughters, Maggie age one, Lisa age eight, and the star of the show, Bart Simpson is ten.

"He's always playing jokes and pranks on people," said Mike McLaughlin, sophomore. "I've never met anyone in real life like him, but it would be neat if I could."

Still in a family-type setting, there's the Bundys. The show Married with Children is the complete opposite of the typical Leave it to Beaver. Al Bundy is a shoe salesman who gets no respect from anyone, especially his family. His shopaholic wife, Peg; ditzy daughter, Kelly and son Bud, are the components of this not-so-traditional family.

Fox Network also debuted some sitcoms with a more serious side. Booker stars 21 Jump Street actor Richard Grieco. He plays undercover cop, Dennis Booker.

Alienation, from the movie, is about two cops, one alien and one earthling. Together, they combat L.A. crime.

Premiering in late May, In Living Color is somewhat of a miniaturized Saturday Night Live, with a predominantly black cast.

Movies that stay with us forever, influence our lives and touch us in many ways. They can make us laugh, cry, take us on dangerous adventures, and even make us fall in love.

This year, the blockbuster film, Batman took us to Gotham City to watch the comic book hero defeat the Joker.

While Born on the Fourth of July told the poignant story of a Vietnam war veteran's battle with himself, Steel Magnolias combined laughter and tears until the closing credits rolled.

"Steel Magnolias was funny and sad, but it had a very specific message too," said Shannon Port, sophomore.

Hunt for the Red October immersed movie-goers into the Atlantic for the cold war thriller. "I thought it was suspenseful and exciting. I liked it a lot," said Heather Ramsey, sophomore.

Elsewhere in the sea world, Walt Disney Studios created another classic, The Little Mermaid.

On the more gruesome side, Nightbreed, Tales from the Dark Side and Nightmare on Elm Street V, crept across the silver screen.

Comedy was a big winner at the box office as well. Opportunity Knocks, Harlem Nights and Look Who's Talking reached $100 million.

Academy Award winning films such as Driving Miss Daisy grossed $100.1 million.

Romance was the main plot in Always, Pretty Woman, and Revenge.

In Danny Devito's War of the Roses, the two main characters portrayed by Michael Douglas and Kathleen Turner, fell from a chandelier to a very unhappy ending.

Cartoon heroes The Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles made their screen debut and generated $109.6 million. "I have been a turtle fan since the beginning, so naturally I liked the movie," said Derek Bontrager, junior.

Whether movie goers were in search of a smile, a tear, or a chill, all emotions were offered this movie season to audiences everywhere.

MUSIC

...Abdul...Stones

.....
Every year, numerous awards are presented to artists and performers for their contribution to society. This year Bonnie Raitt was the big Grammy winner pulling in four awards: Album of the Year, Best Female Pop Vocal Performance, Best Rock Vocal Performance by a Female and Best Traditional Blues Recording.

Among other Grammy Winners were Soul II Soul, Michael Bolton and Don Henley.

Meanwhile, Paula Abdul cleaned up at the MTV Music Awards, also taking four. George Michael picked up the Video Vanguard Award, an honor presented to a performer achieving video excellence.

Heavy metal band Guns n' Roses received two American Music Awards.

During their acceptance speech, guitarist Slash, slurred obscenities on live television. A one-week boycott against the band by local radio station

WZPL followed. The station refused to play any Guns n' Roses music.

Other American Music Award winners include Paula Abdul, Milli Vanilli, and Bobby Brown.

By Maria Potts

Tiny and terrifically talented Paula Abdul keeps moving straight up the charts and knocking everyone out.

This Syrian-Brazilian-French-Canadian-Jewish-American success did not come over night, though. She got her first break as a Laker girl, when she was spotted by Marlon and Jackie Jackson in 1984. She choreographed the Jackson's "Torture" video.

Later Abdul paired up with Janet Jackson to choreograph some of her videos. Abdul and Jackson became close friends, as well as rivals.

After all her choreography success, Abdul decided to try recording an LP. Released in June 1988, "Forever Your Girl" initially bombed and the first two singles, "Knocked Out" and "(It's Just) The Way That You Love Me," never broke into the top 40 on the charts.

Six months after the LP's release, some stations began playing the third single, "Straight Up," which overnight made Abdul one of the most popular recording artists.

Since then she has had four number one singles and a number one album. At the MTV music awards Abdul received four awards for "Straight Up": best video by female artist, best dance video, best editing in video, and best choreography in video.

Then at the 1990 Emmy Awards, she received her first Emmy for outstanding achievement in choreography for her work with The Tracy Ulman Show. Also, she won two American Music Awards and a Grammy nomination as singer-dancer-choreographer. Paula Abdul wants to add another hyphen in her career title--actress.

FASHION ...baggies...vests

When it comes to fashion, Ben Davis students are noticing a swing toward class.

"It seems like loose, casual, and comfortable have taken over for the painted-on, cheap look," said Monica Herron, junior. "Some of the celebrities are even changing their style to project class. Look at Madonna now compared to three years ago! She trashed the 'Boy Toy' image for the innocent look."

One of the most controversial fashion issues this year has been the return of bell-bottoms. "I told my kids they would be wearing them someday, and they said I was crazy," said Mrs. Sarah Corwin, English. "All I can say is I told you so! I knew they would be back."

Today's "bells" look more like skirts and are often worn with the legs tied together in back.

Several new leg looks were introduced this year. Baggy, rayon pants have taken Ben Davis by storm. For the guys, the look is a dropped crotch seam in wild patterns, plaids, and solids; and for the girls, "balloon" legs with tightly tapered ankles cut in a V-shape. Also popular with the girls are the footless stockings with lace around the ankle. They are worn under skirts, shorts, and pants.

Vests have also become a major fashion issue. "The look is classic. For guys and girls, they have become one of the hottest selling items this year," said Tracy Gee, assistant manager at a store in Lafayette Square. "And everyone is wearing leather and suede. The expensive look is definitely in."

"I think today most people wear clothes that reflect the way they feel," said Karrie Schnurpel, voted this year's best dressed senior girl. "If I'm feeling good, I like to dress up and go all out: the clothes, the hair, everything. Sometimes I feel more casual and a sweatshirt and jeans will do the job."

Seventeen magazine reports that for 1990, "Classic clothes are way cool."

By Kama Cunningham

Being fashionable is important to today's teens at work as well as school.

"When I decided to get a job I wanted it to be somewhere that I could dress nice and wear what I wanted," said Kim Curl, junior, who works at a department store. "I can dress in all the latest fashions; I also receive a discount."

"Even though I do other things with my money, my main purpose for working a part-time job was I wanted to buy my own clothes," said Stacy Miller, senior.

Some student workers' jobs do not allow them to wear all their fashionable clothes. Senior Janet Hynes' job requires her to wear a uniform.

"I'd much rather dress in my 'cool' clothes at work, but uniforms aren't that bad," said Hynes.

Sometimes the ease of wearing a uniform seems less complicated.

"I don't have to go through the process of piecing an outfit together," said Hynes, "and not having to worry about what you're wearing provides somewhat of relaxation on the job."

To recognize academic excellence, the top 30 in the sophomore, junior, and senior classes were guests of the school during a breakfast. In May, outstanding seniors were honored during the second annual Evening of Excellence.

Achieving excellence on his own, Senior, David Wigington brought home a second place ranking for his 1989 Westside Messenger speech competition in Golden, Colorado. Wigington continued his winning performances in 1990, by being named the 1990 American Legion State Oratorical contest champion.

Dual achievements were shared by Leigh Stickler and Sean Romine, who advanced to the summer debate Nationals.

"The idea of going to Nationals was exciting to me because I wanted to experience debate on a higher level," said Stickler.

Professionally speaking, Business Professionals of America participated in the state leadership conference. Winners qualifying for Nationals were Dionne Futch, Ebony Barron, Shelly Eaton, and Paul Short.

Creative minds abundant at Ben Davis, Senior Jennifer Price won first place in BD's poetry contest. Kristi Jugg, sophomore, placed second.

Ben Davis was chosen as one of seven schools in Indiana to participate in a new program called the Tech Prep Program. It combined math, English, and science into a three-hour program to prepare selected students for a technological career.

Also, students experienced cooperative learning. This program attempted to "rid" classrooms of only the traditional lecture approach. Group activities combined ideas for a "cooperative" atmosphere. To learn and share innovative ideas, teachers attended six in-service sessions led by Laura Waalkes and Anita Thompson. Recognizing her efforts, Ben Davis teachers selected Waalkes as 1990 Teacher of the Year.

In 1989, Spanish teacher Tom Alsop was named Wayne Township Teacher of the Year. He advanced as one of the top ten finalists in the state competition.

Senior Jonathan Dworak and journalism teacher Janet McKinney were honored at the Indiana Academic All-Star banquet in April. Co-valedictorian Dworak designated McKinney as the educator having most influenced his academic career.

Students and teachers helped students afterschool. National Honor Society members tutored peers during special afterschool sessions. To prepare students for SAT, teachers in math, English, and science worked with students after school.

Twenty-eight students traveled to San Luis Potosi, Mexico, for the IU Spanish Honors Program. Students attended classes in English, literature, music, and history. In the afternoon they indulged in Mexican cooking, dancing, and acting classes.

Creativity in the classroom

When school days pass slowly, classes seem longer than 55 minutes. To relieve the monotony, teachers practice creativity in their classrooms.

As part of a year-long project, during in-service workshops teachers learned about new methods called cooperative learning. Students were grouped together to research and learn as a team.

Joni Newton, special education, supports and commends cooperative learning.

"There is a need for students to interact with one another," she said. "It is not only an educational experience, but also a social one that students can better relate to."

Everyone has a part in the activity. Laura Waalkes, 1990 Ben Davis Teacher of the Year, said, "Cooperative learning lets students work together as a whole, while also making the lesson more interesting."

Through this method, students enjoy group learning. Junior Jon Deal said, "I like it when teachers allow us to work in groups. Everyone enjoys having a part in the lesson."

Other innovative methods utilized by the 167 teachers also involved student participation. In foreign language, motivation encompassed verbal exercise, skits, role playing, and listening to foreign rock music.

English teachers offered open discussion, where students could expressively input interpretations of literature and poetry.

Ben Davis has maintained excellence in education for 98 years. This year, teachers challenged students with cooperative learning, simulations, and other student participation lessons.

They dreamed a dream

"Ben Davis Marching Giants, you may take the field for competition!" That's what the 271 members of the band heard on October 28 at the ISSMA State contest. Take the field they did!

Led by directors Jim Butz, Gary Wishmeyer, and Gary Fields and with the help of senior drum majors Eric LaVoy, Rick Domogolik, Jennifer Price, and Kim Curry, the band's performance included the musical selections of "Rejouissance," "A Child Is Born," "God Bless The Child," and "I Dreamed a Dream" from the musical "Les Miserables."

The flag corps, also known as the guard, added an extra splash of color to the band's overall visual effect. Led by guard instructor Shelly Crooks, the guard learned complex routines and practiced one extra night to perfect the presentation.

The band placed first in the Mid State Marching contest at the I.S.U. campus in Terre Haute. They also placed first in contests at Carmel, Elwood, Columbus, and Lawrence Central. Finally, the Marching Giants placed an impressive second at the State contest in the Dome.

Placing second to Center Grove, long time rival of Ben Davis, was a big disappointment. However, one advantage in rivalry was the improvement in rapport between Carmel and Ben Davis bands. They traced standing ovations. Carmel placed third in the competition.

"It was great to think that some of the bands still have the attitude that marching is supposed to be fun, not a war," said junior flute player Jennifer Willoughby.

Senior Jenni Price summed up the year, "It was the best season I've had in my three years here. It was disappointing to lose State after winning for the past five years, but it was a good year. I was proud of the class we showed, both on and off the field."

Breaking down barriers

"With students taking Latin, German, French, and Spanish, foreign languages have become a major part of the curriculum for 840 students," said Dan Carrington, guidance director.

"The number of students participating in the classes, trips and cultural experiences of each language has increased over the years," said Connie Lahr, Spanish.

"Consisting of approximately 418 students, Spanish is the largest foreign language elective taken," said Carrington.

During this year each department sponsored a variety of language activities. "The enthusiastic and creative Spanish department has engaged in cultural experiences such as: The Mexican cooking stores in Spain, The National Spanish Contest, dinners at Chi-Chi's, and Christmas caroling," said Thomas Alsop, Spanish chairperson.

"Overall, I feel that this year's students find the language more exciting, and challenging," said Waalkes.

As a result of students being forbidden to speak anything but Spanish in Room F236, "a native speaking environment was been brought into the classroom where the students were able to progress and understand the spoken language," said Alsop.

At the State Spanish contest in April, at the University of Indianapolis, students captured the State title for the fifth consecutive year.

"Other special events of the year were the invitation of students into the National Spanish Honor Society in May, National Spanish test, and the spring trip to Mexico," said Lahr.

On the other hand, the Latin department had been busy taking part in the Latin Convention at Butler University, a canoe trip at Turkey Run, and a hayride.

"The broader spectrum of ability in this year's Latin classes is what has made them different from the previous ones," said William Gilmartin, Latin.

The Latin students enjoyed trips to Kings Island, IRT for Julius Caesar, a Roman toga party, a videotaping of mythology skits, and an authentic Roman foods day.

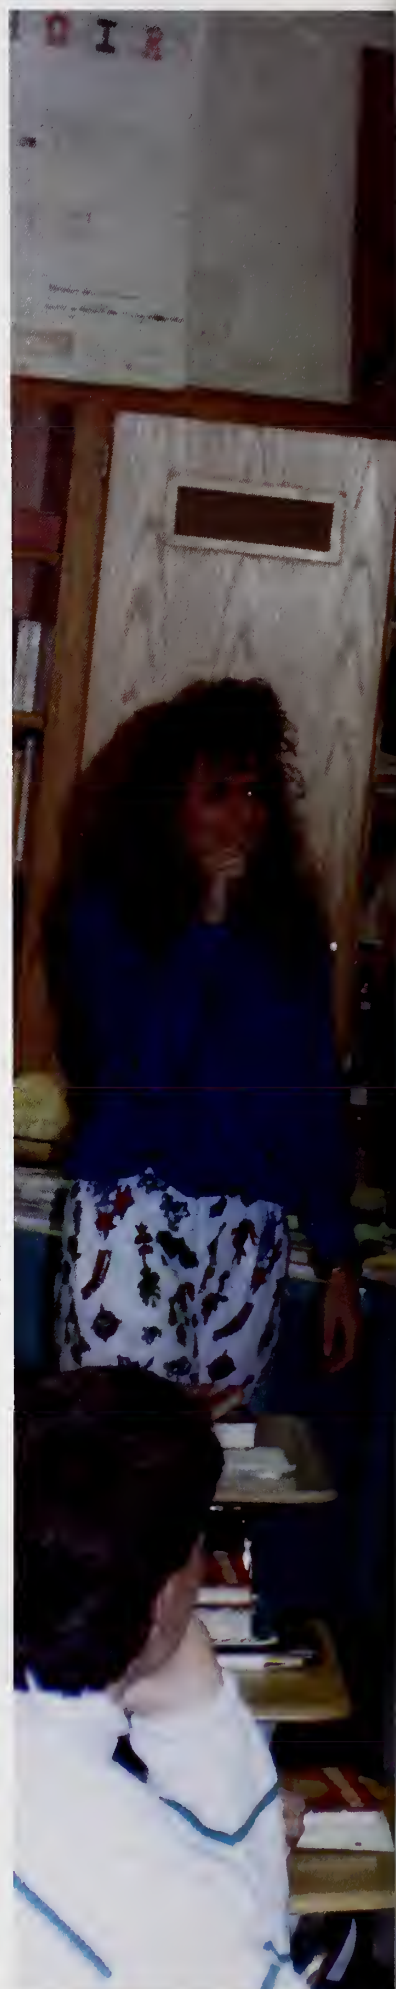

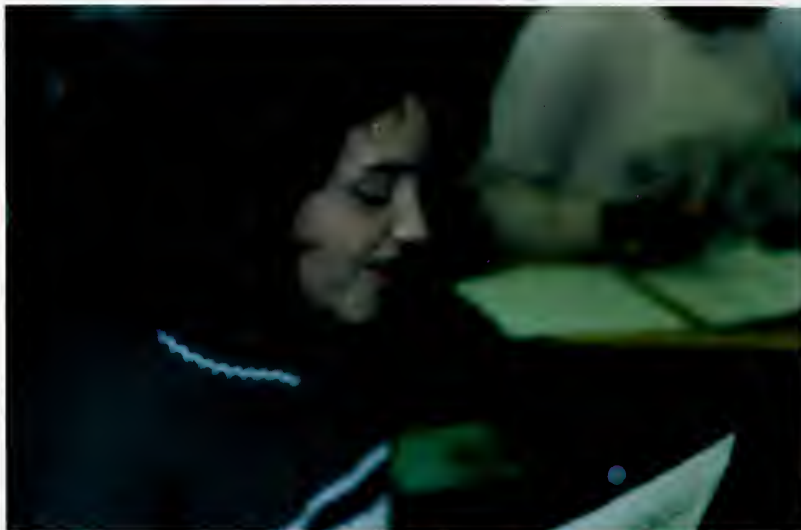

"Restaurant trips, a movie party with junior high students, the participation in state and national academic competitions, and intra-language sporting games, are just a few events French shared this year," said Bob McKinley, French.

"Besides the normal skits and the occasional videotaping, we did a T V news program based on characters and events that happened in one of the books that we read," said McKinley.

"Ben Davis has had an overall successful foreign language department. With the creativity of each language, we will continue this tradition," said Carrington.

Artistic expressions

"Each of the arts— music, dance, literature, and design— is an individual human expression where creativity is taking place," said Larry Hurt, art . "No matter how highly advanced academics are, if there is no creativity, it is of little use."

More than 40 Ben Davis art students expressed their creativity this winter by entering their work in the Scholastic Art Contest sponsored by L.S.

Ayres. The entries were sent to the Landmark Center, and judged along with more than 1,800 entries.

Local Gold Key winners from Ben Davis included Sophomores Brian Presnell, David Jones, Erik Cooper, Jennifer Rakoczy, Seniors Phil Nguyen and Adam Leeds.

"The experience gained by these students who entered this contest is of great value," said Larry Lambert.

He explained that the contest offered students a unique opportunity "because of the competition itself, as well as the outstanding work that students used for their portfolios."

The contest entries were added to other art projects in student's portfolios which Lambert said would be used for college entrance by students pursuing a career in art.

Musical lifts the spirits

Damn Yankees, this year's musical, was a chance for members of Purple Aires, Internationales, Soundsations, Music Men, Allegros, and Madrigals to combine their talents with those of Mask and Gavel and create a colorful, expressive cast.

Choir students also displayed talent and creativity in the 1990 Solo Ensemble Contest. Fifteen Ben Davis students received first place.

"We still have a contest which will allow the Purple Aires to advance to state level," said Patty Schaefer, music.

But contests were not limited to Indiana. For a special performance, Purple Aires took their talents to St. Louis.

"We have improved tremendously since the beginning of school. I think the St. Louis trip helped because everyone had a chance to get close and learn to work together," said Senior Rick Ping.

At Christmas, Madrigals entertained the school and community with a traditional dinner theater performance.

A member of choir eight years, Senior Kyle Overstreet said, "Since we meet only after school, in Madrigals we must work hard to learn and study our music on our own. Because we are such a small group, we have to all try to get along with everybody, and for the most part we do."

Working for an education

Amid the hustle and bustle of an average school day one can hear people talking, books slamming, and lockers jamming. If one listens very closely, the almost inaudible sounds of buzzing saws, banging hammers, and humming engines are heard. These noises are the sounds attributed to the vocational programs at Ben Davis.

These programs include food services, autobody, auto mechanics, computer programming, health occupations, heating and air conditioning, building trades, horticulture, aerospace science, electronic technology, ground school, and advanced ground school.

The vocational programs are of the highest caliber. "Our program is the only one like it in the nation. It clarifies the personal and attitudinal requirements needed for the position desired," said Bob Weidenbener, aero-sciences.

Ray Crawford, auto mechanics, said the program is so outstanding because of, "fine facilities, dedicated instructors, and a professional approach to training. We try to instill a sense of work ethics and personal dependability along with many technical facts."

Each class has its own specialized curriculum. In regard to the health occupations class, Junior Rhonda Morgan said, "We learn medical terminology, anatomy, and physiology. We also explore different careers in the medical field and experience hands-on education. Overall, it gives a real sense of professional development."

Crawford said auto mechanics class helps students. "Studying hydraulics, principals apply to automotive brake systems, brake system construction, and electronic anti-lock brake system control."

The programs offer the participating students post-gradulatory benefits. Sandra Irwin, health occupations, said, "They know the specific job skills as well as particular employment knowledge."

Gregory Bernhard, auto mechanics, summarized the vocational program as "one of the most technically up-to-date programs in the state."

Biology & Doc's Roosters

Roosters, snakes, lizards, bugs, and general clutter are all factors in the room known as "Doc's class."

Jack Voris (Doc) has been a teacher at Ben Davis for 20 years. He teaches Biology 3-4 to upperclassmen.

Voris's biology classroom has a distinctive image. Senior Oscar Perez said, "The first things I noticed the first day of class, besides Doc himself, were the rooster cage and the clutter everywhere."

One well-known component of Doc's academic requirements is the insect collection. Voris said, "I have been giving the insect assignment every year for as many years as I have been teaching 3-4."

Senior Lori Aspaas said, "Doc did not waste any time in assigning the bug collection. On the second day of class he told us about the assignment and started right in on lecturing about different bugs."

Voris assigns the task for its process, not for the end product. "The type of team effort, where all work together for a common goal. The preparation, mechanics, and the actual 'doing' process are more important than the end product," said Voris.

Doc believes a teacher must relate to students and their lives. "I like to surprise them with what I know about them. It helps eliminate any preliminary problems. I can go talking along, 'bomb' someone, and go right on lecturing ... If we didn't have a bit of lightness, we'd all go crazy."

Perez said, "The first day, Doc started class by commenting on what people had done during the previous summer... trashing them."

Many students take Biology 3-4 just because Voris teaches it. Senior Pat Stevens said, "I didn't need a Biology 3-4 credit; I included the class on my schedule for the experience of having Doc as a teacher."

Even though the students who are in Doc's class find it extremely hard, they have the utmost respect for him. They appreciate time he spends after school.

Stevens said, "Doc is one of the best teachers at this school; he relates to us, and is there to help us, whenever we need it. He devotes his time to his students in an effort to teach us and help us learn how to learn."

"Employable skills and a good background in business are just a few of the qualities that students obtain with completion of our courses," said Peggy Sandberg, business.

"I feel that when I graduate, I will have the skills to get a good job in the business field and I will have an advantage in my college classes," said Lisa Waggoner, senior.

The business department offers a variety of courses to the students. "I think that our business department is very strong with our class sizes averaging 25 students," said Eva Moran, business.

"Numerous awards were presented to the Business Professionals of America and DECA students during the District, State, and National conferences," said Nancy Kisling, department chairperson.

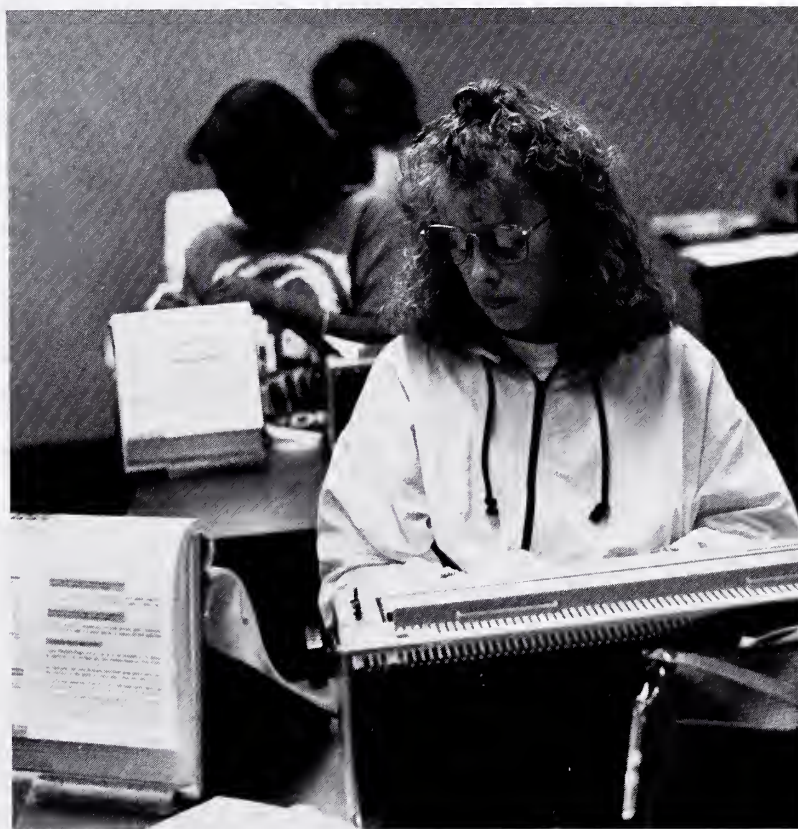

At Nationals, Senior Paul Short received second place in both data specialist and business math proficiency, while Junior Dionne Futch received seventh in prepared verbal. The Ambassador Award was given to Senior Robert Wilson. Senior Lisa Waggoner was selected as the 1989-1990 outstanding business student by the business teachers and was recognized at an IBEC banquet.

While most of the courses are offered inside the school, there are a few co-op and vocational courses offered outside of the school. "COE, ASL, computer accounting, business computer applications, and word processing are the vocational classes offered. COE is open to seniors. Students usually work 15 to 20 hours a week through this program," said Sandberg.

"Our department gets better each year and I am anxious to see how strong it will be in the years to come," said Moran.

Solving for real life?

Of the 38 credits required to gain that ever-so cherished diploma, students are required to take six semesters of mathematics.

Believing math is important to a student's future, math teacher Dick Elmore said, "It will help them in college and also give them confidence when they are forced to learn new math concepts in school or on the job."

Gary Mahoney, math, agreed, "There is definitely an everyday need. Even though the math itself isn't always used, the disciplines are utilized such as sequences and patterns."

Math segregated the school body into two separate categories, those who liked it and those who hated it. Junior Lee Ann Vallard said, "I don't enjoy math, because it gets so confusing and I just want to give up."

In contrast, some students found math enjoyable by the instruction received. Sophomore Sherry Jaynes said, "At first I didn't enjoy it, but now I have a teacher who's a real teacher; she's very special to me. She's helped me work miracles with algebra; now I love it."

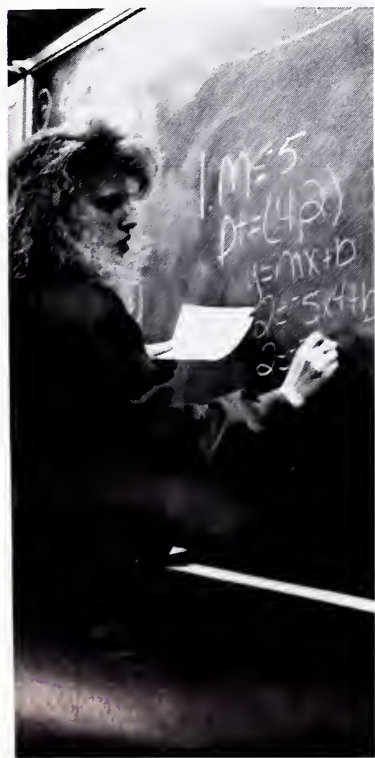

Of the 16 math teachers, all teach different courses and have reasons for choosing teaching for their career. Mahoney said, "It all becomes worthwhile when we see the 'light' come on in a student's head because he finally understood one of us."

Teachers are human also and sometimes have feelings of frustration. Mahoney said, "The least rewarding experience of teaching is when I lose students to grades or attitude, especially when they have an untapped talent for math."

A new program was introduced this year, Tech Prep. The math curriculum was developed by professors from Ivy Tech. "This area of the program focused on math topics that are used most in the technologies," said Ross McKenna, math.

racticing the practical

The home economics department centralized its energies on revitalizing the standard classes, according to Ann Newman, home economics. "This year there was much more to home economics than cooking, sewing, and playschool," Newman said.

One newly-initiated event was the mock wedding. Students were chosen as a couple, buying property and paying bills to portray a real life marriage situation. "We added the ceremony to simulate the excitement and problems that occur on the wedding day," Kay Dunbar, home economics, said.

New life now focuses more on the infant mortality problem. Newman said, "Prenatal care is current and goes with the design of our class. The importance of prenatal care has always been in the curriculum, but the infant mortality issue gave us reason to emphasize it even more than before."

The family living class altered its focus to include social pressures, family abuse, divorce, alcoholism, and quarreling. "The main purpose of the family living class," Dunbar said, "was to discuss and share responsible attitudes, and to become aware of what each individual needed to be happy in his/her lifetime. With that in mind, we planned class study around student need and interest."

New approaches were credited, in part, to the arrival of new equipment. "The department received a lot of teaching supplies from the state which were considered to be high technology," Newman added.

Students noticed changes in the department. Junior Michelle Bryant said, "I got more out of personal management this year than I did in home economics classes last year."

istory repeats itself

His palms were sweating profusely. His heart was beating faster than ever before. Although otherwise a typical day, the unusual symptoms were caused because Jimmy had only one minute before he had to become George Washington in front of 25 peers.

"Even though feared and talked about negatively at the beginning, simulations become a fun, meaningful, comfortable way to learn," said James Hartsock, social studies.

As a part of daily projects, teachers use simulations to make learning more enjoyable.

Hartsock said, "When students participate, learning is more fun, as well as meaningful to them."

Junior Adam Berry believes "simulations add more responsibility. If you are just doing book work, it messes up only your grade and your knowledge. In simulations, the whole group relies on your preparedness; therefore, you have to have a better understanding for the whole."

Berry participated in three simulations this year in Hartsock's U.S. history classes. In a courtroom hearing he was a politician defending the term, "Progressive." Also, he was an Iroquois Indian in a powwow with other Indian tribes and was the Rev. Jesse Jackson on speeches given about black civil rights leaders.

Dan Bishop, sophomore, was Huldreich Zwingli, a Protestant supporter, in a trial of Protestants vs. Catholics.

"You see it in front of you like watching TV. It's easier to understand than just by reading," said Bishop. "We didn't have to do as much homework, either!"

Teachers realize that students get nervous and scared to get up in front of the class. Recalling high school simulations, Laura Waalkes, Spanish, said, "I was very nervous at first. I had the dry mouth, sweaty palms, and the heartbeat too."

Students have different viewpoints about physical education and health.

Some of the things people hate about gym is the fact that they have to swim.

Michelle Blanchard, junior, states her opinion about swimming, "I didn't like it because I didn't have enough time to get ready for class."

Physical education consists of classes such as fundamental P.E., advanced P.E., aerobics, net games, advanced swimming, and men's sports.

Advanced physical education is mainly for athletes.

Advanced swimming consists of members of the swimming team. Jeni Caldwell, junior enjoys her swimming class, "I liked being in there because it's a chance for all of us to see each other. It just adds to the fact of us being like a family," said Caldwell.

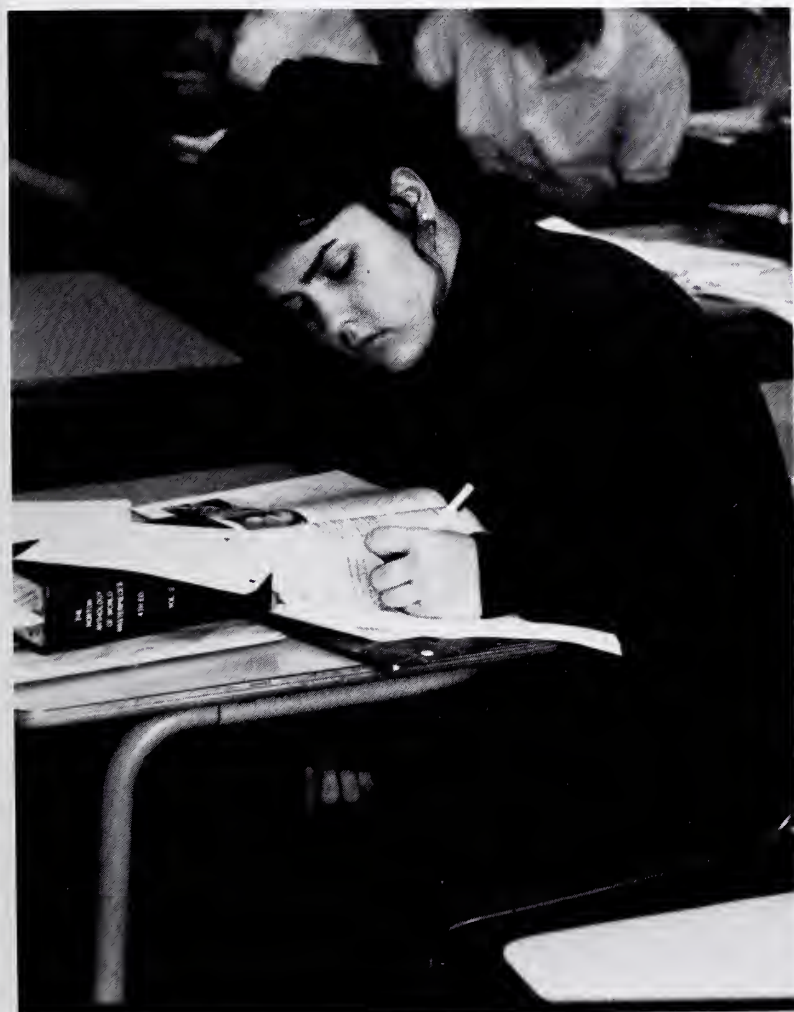

Aerobics classes were chosen from the state of Indiana to be the pilot program Dance for the Heart. It is associated with Jump Rope for Heart and is the first time for this type of program. American Heart Association sent a guest aerobics instructor in to lead the group in the dance. The students danced for 45 minutes. Amy Paino, junior, said, "I enjoy the class because we have fun while we exercise and everyone gets along. We just work together, so we can benefit in the end."

Health classes include such studies as respiratory system, sexual education, drug awareness, and safety.

Even though P.E. and health are mandatory, they can be very useful. Kristi Caffey, senior, said, "I learned a lot in these classes."

Creative computing

The English Department benefitted from facility and program changes.

In the beginning of the year the department received 30 new IBM PC computers and also Word Perfect software. This offered students an opportunity to work in the new writing labs upstairs in K hall. Teachers were trained at computer workshops sponsored by the school corporation.

Sarah Corwin, English, said, "Students use the computers excessively in the creative writing class."

Creative writing gave students a chance to write about personal experiences teaching them to express opinions.

The students may use the computers as much as needed.

The humanities class, with "hands on" focus was taught by Karen Bennett. Group project was to present Greek play. The drama which involved Craig Boeck, Amy Franklin, and Stacey Simmons, "was wonderful," according to Bennett.

"Humanities was great. I have learned so much this semester. Mostly about the different types of cultures," stated Stephanie George, senior.

Programs were individual crests, a medieval project, a guest speaker from the opera, and trips to IRT.

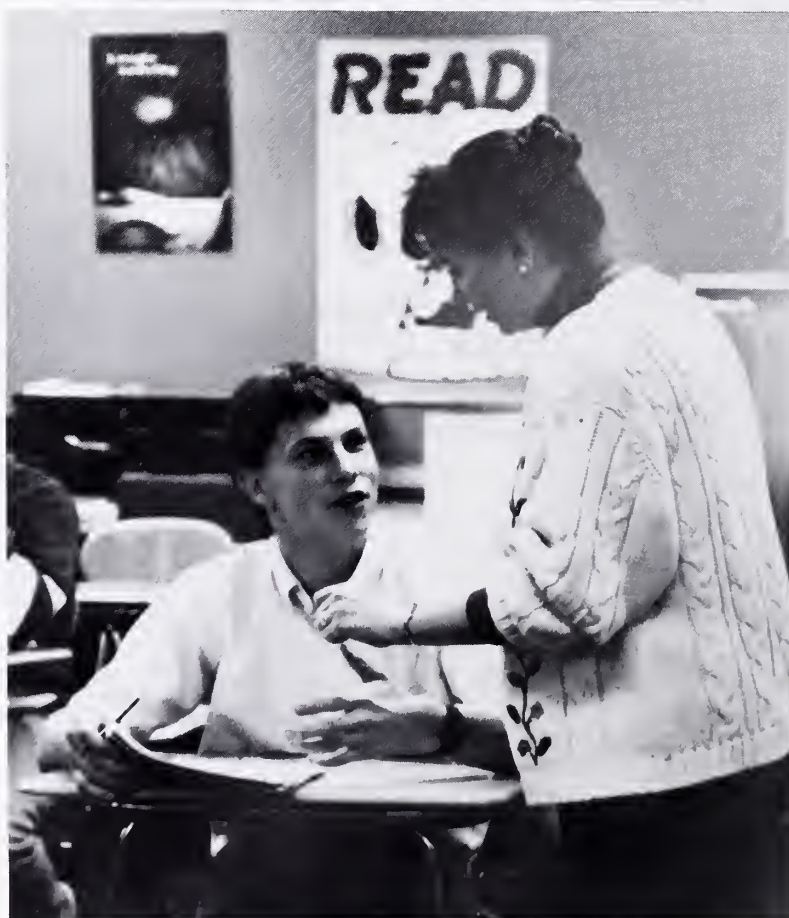

"I love teaching this class," said Bennett, "It shows big pictures of Western civilization. Students are learning and I think having fun at the same time. It's incredible to see the enthusiasm in them while they work."

Angie Smith, senior added, "At first I thought the class would be a waste of time, but come to find out it was one of my most interesting classes this semester. Mrs. Bennett is a wonderful teacher, and with her being so involved in it, she makes it that much funner to come and learn. The projects are great. I've really had a good time in this class."

Writing for publications

Each year Spotlight and Keyhole staffs dedicate their time and hearts to their own publication. With all the time and energy spent, each publication achieved excellence and a record number of awards.

"Expanding to a 16-page newspaper is an accomplishment in itself," said co-editor of the Spotlight, Julie Piatt. She earned the prestigious Gold Key Award from Quill and Scroll.

The Keyhole, too, enlarged its publication by adding 24 pages. In addition, there were many new design techniques such as the torn effect, the marble screen, and shaded bars to jazz up the look.

"What is unique about this year's yearbook from past years is the way we designed the cover," said design editor, Jennifer Yearly. "It is all our work and we are extremely proud of the entire book."

Design changes were also made in the Spotlight to add a new style to the newspaper.

"We went to Missouri to get expert advice on how to make the paper look better," said co-editor Jonathan Dworak. "There professionals helped us to create a magazine design for the newspaper, which everyone seemed to accept."

Trips for both staffs offered new learning experiences to each individual for their publications.

"Five Keyhole editors went to Clarksville, Tennessee, to the Josten's plant. We gained an understanding of how our yearbook was printed," said editor-in-chief, Kelly Barber.

In addition to trips, staffers benefitted from working together.

"Although in September the majority of the Keyhole staff members were untrained and inexperienced in yearbooking, they worked hard to learn how to produce a total student publication," said Janet McKinney, now advisor to both publications.

"Student support, positive attitudes, and enthusiasm on both staffs made the change in advisor a rewarding transition for all of us," said McKinney.

Continuing tradition, both publications earned staff and individual awards on the State, and Regional, and National levels.

Arguing for recognition

The speech and debate teams had a prosperous year with the numerous Saturday competitions. This year once again proved that speech and debate classes develop award-winning teams.

Junior Renee Smith thinks that debate is more than a class. "I think of debate as a group of intellectually profound young adults who are peacefully trying to solve current world affairs."

Larry Highbaugh, debate coach, summarized the debate season. "We did pretty well this year. We qualified a team for National competition, Leigh Stickler and Sean Romine. The reason we did well was because of a nicely balanced squad. We also await next year's resolution."

Looking forward to representing Indiana at the National competition in San Jose, California, Romine said, "It's a great honor because it shows we worked hard enough to be considered one of the best," said Romine.

Senior J. B. Hendricks believes that benefits from debate have allowed him "to gain an open-mindedness to certain problems. It has also helped me to sharpen my researching skills which I will use next year at college."

Giving an overview of the speech season, Max McQueen, said, "Even before our season was finished, my hopes were always high."

Eventhough students were involved in other activities, the team pulled it together to capture honors. On March 10, Ben Davis earned the Sectional championship.

"This year's Sectional results were the strongest ever, with 31 Regional qualifiers plus three alternates."

Seniors David Wigington, Kim Likens, and Chris Walden were Regional qualifiers who advanced to State on March 31.

Focusing on benefits from the speech team, Sophomore Royce Smith said, "The speech team has given me the confidence I need to succeed in life."

Senior Brian Diewart said, "The team did very well. We improved over time, especially when working toward Sectionals. I'm glad that I was a part of the team."

Proud of his team, McQueen said, "We've won at least one trophy from every meet."

Strive to win

"When you are on a team, you don't want to disappoint anyone on the team. You work a lot harder when others are counting on you."

John Jarosinski, boys cross country coach

Beating tough rival Carmel by five points, the boys cross country team captured the State title for the first time since 1961. State finalists were Bryan Huston, Marc Dickison, John McDonald, Jonathon Deal, Jeff Morgan, Sean Hartman, and Mark Chastain.

"I felt really stunned," said Chastain. "I kind of expected to win, but it was still a great feeling." Chastain finished 38th, improving his overall record by 10 seconds. Huston came in seventh overall.

"We'll lose strong senior leadership when Bryan, Marc, and John graduate, but I think we will be just as strong next year," commented Chastain.

Meanwhile, the boys wrestling team made history, advancing six wrestlers into State competition. State finalists were Trent Dotlich, Sherman Woodard, Jason DeLois, David Crawford, Eric Clemmens, and Billy Anderson.

"I believe anyone who has made it this far is tough," said Woodard. He carried his 34-0 record to State, but lost to a tough opponent for a record of 35-1.

One of the first athletics scholarships went to Derek Wilham, who will play starting running back on a four-year $72,000 football scholarship at Vanderbilt University in Nashville, Tennessee.

At State swimming meets, Matt Hinshaw, sophomore, and Elizabeth Duncan, junior, led their teams. Collectively eight swimmers placed at State, posting the second best team ranking ever for the boys. Each team placed 16th.

"This boys basketball team improved consistently, playing one of the strongest schedules in the state," said coach Steve Witty. "They always played hard, played smart, and especially played together."

The Giants overcame top rival, Brebeuf 65-54 in the first round of Sectionals, but lost 63-55 to top-rated Pike in the second game. The Giants ended the season, 15-6. "We opened a lot of eyes," said Antiwan Easley, junior.

Senior Carl Hardy was named to the Indiana-Ohio East-West all-star series. Hardy and Easley were named to the Indianapolis Star and News All Sectional team. Junior Byron Jones was also named to the News team.

Like with any team, strong senior leadership was crucial. "All contributed to the success of our season," said Witty, "They will be greatly missed and next year's seniors will be challenged to follow this good example."

Although losing to a powerful Noblesville team stopped them from going beyond Semi-state, it didn't diminish the fact that the Lady Giants had the best record in Ben Davis history. Sophomore Lisa Mahone was named to the All Tourney team.

"We really appreciate the job the seniors have done. We are losing many girls with graduation, but also have much returning talent," said coach Stan Bengé.

"The team has decided to dedicate next year's season to this year's seniors," said Mandy Murdock, junior.

T total effect

"I want and feel we have a great chance to win it all again next year, if we stay injury free."

Sean Hartman, junior

Winning for the first time in 28 years, the Ben Davis boys cross country team defeated five-time State champion winner Carmel by five points. In the State meet, the Giants scored fewer points than they did in Semi-state.

"It took all seven of our runners to push Carmel's #5 runner back to 37th place and to ensure our victory," stated Coach John Jarosinski.

Ben Davis raced against Carmel six times, winning three of the six. Ben Davis won at the Pike Hokum Karem, Cathedral Invitational, and the most critical meet—State.

Winning State had an impact on the entire team, not just ones who went to State.

"The team was a family; everyone knew everyone, and no one had a strong dislike for anyone else," said manager Jake Herman, sophomore. "This team deserves to win State. With what we had going for us, it was a sure win."

The team entered the season anticipating the State meet for the fourth straight year. Planning to be in the top five and hoping for the title, they put vast effort into summer conditioning.

"We decided what we wanted to do at the beginning of the year (win State), and we did it! It took team effort and everyone's help. I think everyone improved and helped earn the State championship," said Steve Moore, junior.

The times for the State meet ranged from 15:27 to 16:21. Bryan Huston, senior, came in first for Ben Davis, placing seventh. Marc Dickison, senior; Jon Deal and Jeff Morgan, juniors; and Mark Chastain, sophomore, placed at 12th, 13th, 17th, and 18th respectively. These scores totaled the 63 points it took to beat Carmel.

John McDonald, senior, and Sean Hartman, junior, placed 32nd and 33rd. Six of these seven runners turned in lifetime best performances at State.

Hartman attributed part of the team success to the excitement, the competition, and the hype all around the meet.

Deal said, "I was real excited. We knew we were so close. At the finish line other team members were encouraging us to go out and beat Carmel."

"I was proud. I never ran a poor race," replied Huston. "Maybe not as good as I wanted, but always satisfied!"

After State, several runners met with the team and coaches. "We celebrated in class and style," said Travis Kyle, junior. "There's no way to describe how all of us felt after State."

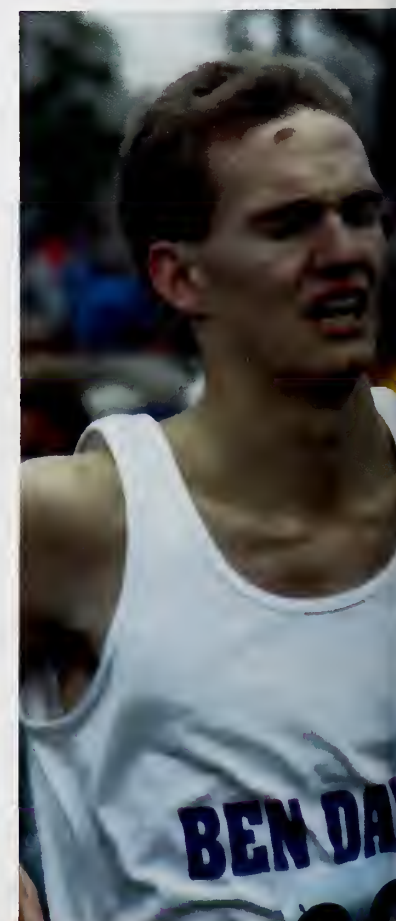

"I felt this was one of the all-time best team performances at State. This was also probably the best overall team we've ever had at Ben Davis," said Jarosinski. "The team should be strong again next year due to returning runners with State experience and the rest of this year's team."

Top returning runners should be Adam Berry, Jean-Paul Bonett, Chastain, Deal, Mike East, Mark French, Hartman, Alan Hocker, Travis Kyle, Steve Moore, and Jeff Morgan.

Coach Jarosinski believes they are all able to break into the top seven. Coach and runners share the confidence that the team has the potential to make it to State 1991.

United win

"The biggest heartbreaker this year was not running State. Next year I'll be there."

Kara Swanson, junior

Crossing the line at the same time with Senior Jody Syck and Junior Kim Hocker is the thing that stands out the most in my mind," said Senior Toi Lee. At the Ben Davis Invitational those three athletes finished the race together. "That was an experience I'll never forget," said Lee.

The girls cross country qualified for their Regionals and State meet. They placed 11th in the State and 3rd in their Regionals.

Working hard for all their victories, they had to run 13 miles a day even through rain and very cold weather. "You had to be very dedicated in order to be a member of our team," said Lee whose best season was this year.

"Being a senior made me want to try harder, because I knew it was my last year, and I didn't have another year to try again," stated Lee.

Two of the toughest opponents were Carmel and North Central. Kim Hocker was voted most spirited team member.

Even though the Swansons were injured, it didn't affect the team's spirit in a negative way. "When Kara screamed, everybody felt it. It made you want to try harder, because you knew she was going through more pain than what you were." Kara broke her femur at Sectionals, but she still kept going.

"This year our team was closer than ever. We suffered together through practices and team injuries, but we also shared moments of accomplishment and happiness," said junior Alicia Swanson.

The girls cross country team pulled together as one, and the scoreboard results proved what unity really could accomplish.

Extra shots

"Dullaghan told us that once we had an opponent down, we had to deliver the KO punch."

Jenny Orme, senior

With an impressive record of 23-3, this Lady Giant basketball team "Refused to Lose," which was only one slogan used by the team.

This determination inspired the best record in Ben Davis girls basketball history. Along with their outstanding record, this team earned Sectional, Regional championships, and the county runner-up titles.

In the final game of the Center Grove Regional, the gym was packed with rival crowds of Roncalli and Ben Davis. As the two teams entered the arena, they were greeted by a thunderous boom of cheers.

Much to their horror, the Giants found themselves down by 17 points with just 4:17 to play in the second quarter. However, with the encouragement of senior point guard Sharrie Sweet, the Giants rallied a 16-1 run to pull to within two points at the half. The final score of 64-59 proved that Ben Davis earned the spotlight as 1990 Regional champs.

"We were down and knew we had to come back and beat Roncalli in order to come home for Semi-state," said Stephanie George.

Though the season ended with a tough loss to Noblesville in Semi-state, the team's overall efforts sparked special recognition and praise.

"I'll never forget this season," said Stan Bengé, coach. "The team was extremely close and all the success came from great attitudes."

Looking to the future, Bengé said, "From here on out Ben Davis girls basketball will always have an opportunity to play in the State finals as a result of these seniors."

Emphasizing his pride, Bengé and his team dedicated the 1991 season to the 1990 Regional champion seniors.

"I felt as if this wrestling team was one big family, and I'll always miss that."

Sherman Woodard, senior

Locking in a new school record, the Giant wrestlers pinned the first Semi-state victory in Ben Davis history. Six wrestlers advanced to State finals, and the team claimed a superb finish.

"As a team, there was a closeness and a sense of 'collective mission' that I have not seen in many other teams," said Coach Joe Virgin.

This year five wrestlers qualified for honorable mention Academic All-State: Seniors David Crawford, Trent Dotlich, Sherman Woodard, Derek Wilham, and Geoff Mahan.

Mahan said, "It is a prestigious honor to be classified as an honorable mention Academic All-State qualifier."

The 1989-90 record was 16-2 with defeats to Decatur and Warren. The wrestlers ended the season with the victorious titles of Sectional, Regional, and Semi-state champions.

At State, Woodard placed third and Jason DeLois, senior, placed fourth. The team came in ninth place overall.

Sharing the challenges of the season, Eric Clements, junior, said, "Our wrestling team really stuck together through the rough times. We were like a family."

Senior J.B. Hendricks said about his love for the sport, "The fact that you alone control your victory or defeat has always drawn me to wrestle."

T eam spirit

"Despite having only 12 returning lettermen and injuries to key players, we had a good season."

Chris Wiesehan, senior

Although this season was not as strong as years past, the Giants still concluded with an impressive record.

"I think this '89 season ended on a disappointing note, but at the beginning everyone thought we would be lucky to go 4-4," said senior linebacker, Mike Hausman. He added that finishing the season at 7-3 proved that a young team can be winners.

With only two losses in regular season (one against Warren Central 14-6, and the other to state-ranked Carmel 35-20), the team showed power and determination in knocking off other teams like North Central.

"We played our hearts out to beat N.C., and it showed," said senior quarterback, Allen Cornett.

Bringing such a team together as a family became a motivating goal. The Giants maintained their slogan TEAM: Together Everyone Accomplishes More.

"Our team followed this motto and worked together in order to do as much as possible to win," said junior tight end Brad Gearlds.

As expected, the Giants faced a long battle through Sectionals. In the end the Giants were upset by the Carmel Greyhounds in the second round of Sectionals. This ended their season hopes for a third straight state victory.

"We had three players who were either out of the game or the week of practice before; that hurt us tremendously," said Coach Dick Dullaghan.

Injuries came at a bad time of the season. Senior Ryan Burtnett experienced a dislocated shoulder and was unable to play, while Jeff Dullaghan and Derek Wilham missed the week of practice before due to injuries.

"We gave Carmel a better game than anyone else did," said Coach Dullaghan. "Without the injuries that we suffered, I believe we would have prevailed."

With the season closed, the team had a hard time accepting the loss which followed two consecutive championship years.

"It ended too quickly," said senior defensive tackle Jeff Miner. "It hurt a lot because we tried so hard and we still lost."

Cornett said, "It didn't just happen like it has in the past. We tried, but the best team doesn't always win."

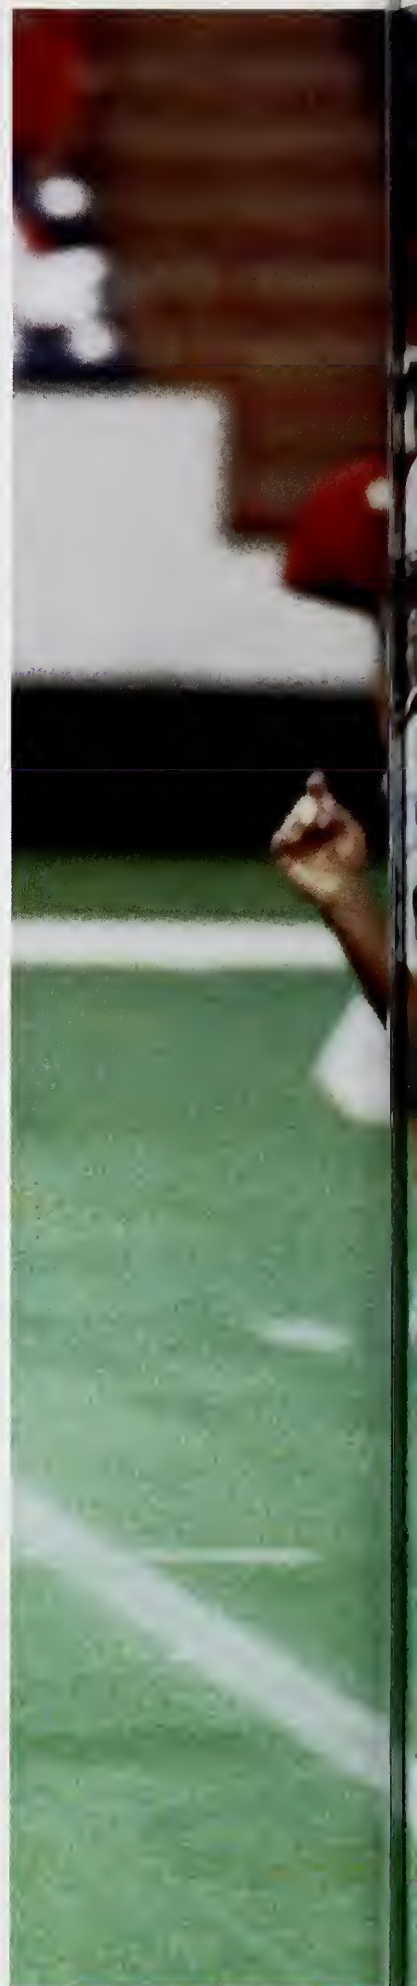

Efforts were recognized by students, parents, and the media. The Indianapolis Star named first team players: Seniors Cornett, Miner, Hausman and Juniors Keith Hensley and Chris Stevens. Other strong players received Honorable Mention: Seniors T.J. Remmetter, Chris Wiesehan, Wilham, Sherman Woodard, David Crawford and Dullaghan.

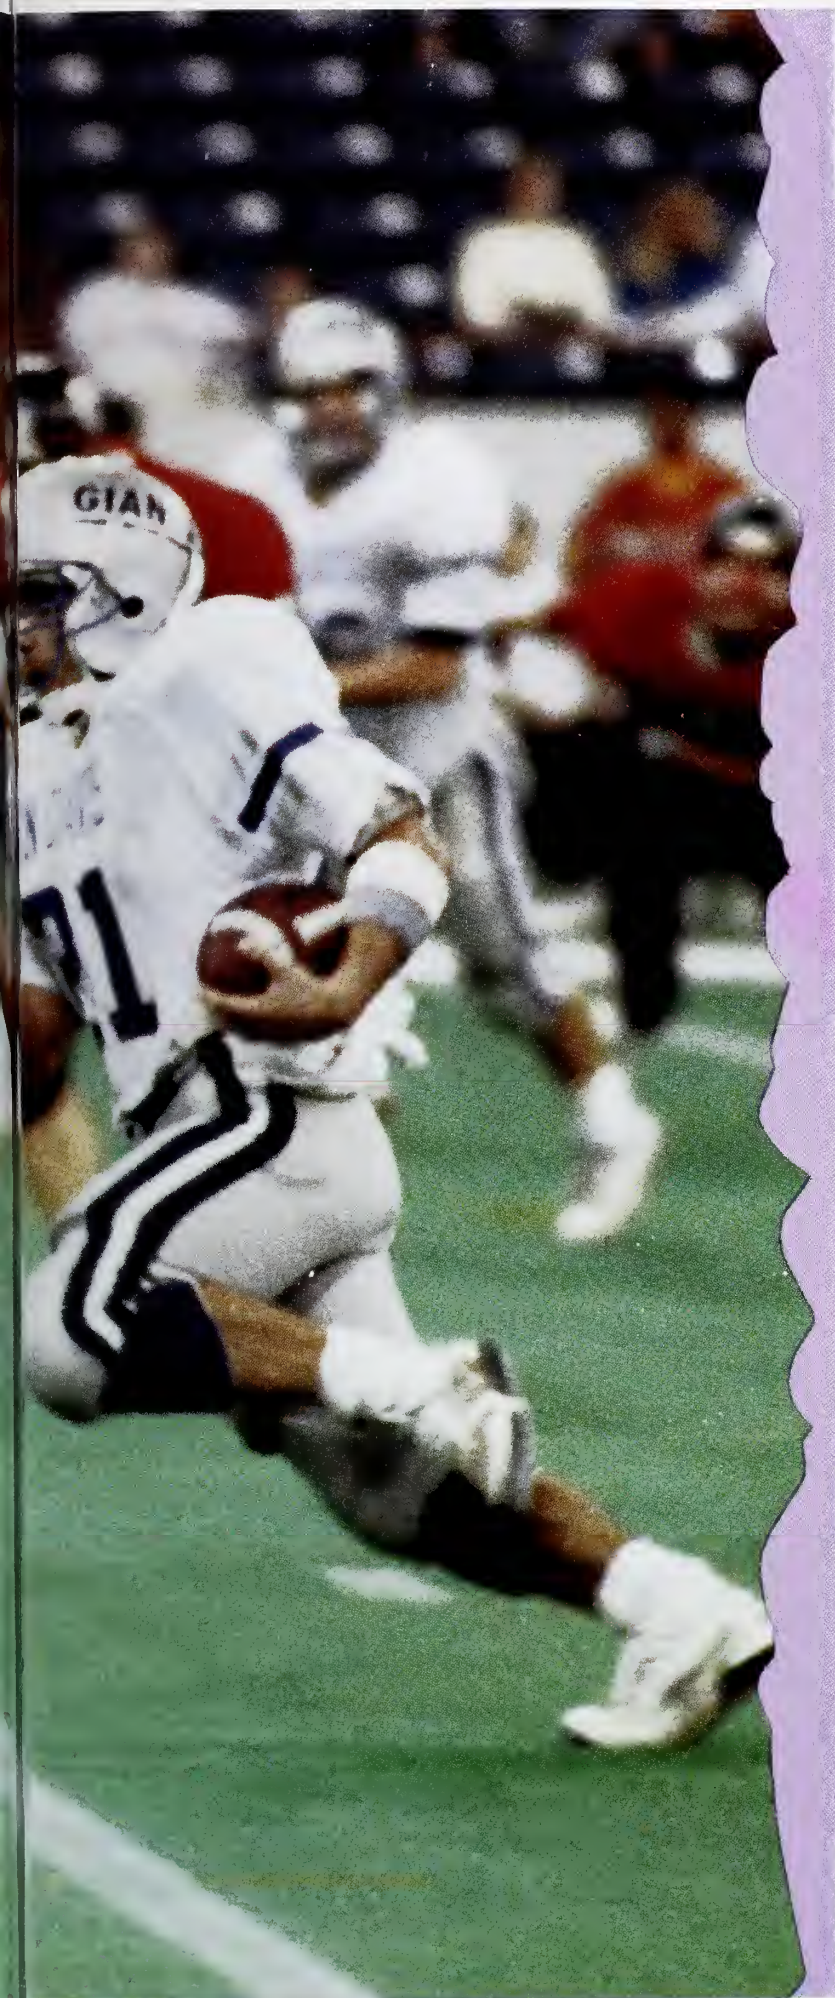

Cornett and Wilham also received UPI All-State recognition. Crawford was elected first team Academic All-state.

Though the season fell short of Giant goals, these players still played with pride, poise, and together as a TEAM.

State meet

"A goal for next season would be to finish in the top 10 and qualify more swimmers for State."

Dan Oyer, junior

Although the boys and girls swimming teams ended seasons three months apart, both placed 16th at respective State competitions.

For the boys, it was the second best team ranking in the history of the school. In 1979 the team was ranked 15th. In 1990 the team improved on recent rankings of 24th in 1989 and 42nd in 1988.

Looking for a possible top ten ranking next year, coach Gary Kinhead said, "This season ran fairly smooth with few problems. The team really came together during the toughest part of the season, Sectionals."

A fifth Sectional championship in February proved the "coming together" of the 23 swimmers and 5 divers on the team.

Highest scores at State were made by Matt Hinshaw, sophomore, in the 200-meter medley and the 100-meter backstroke, and Jon Sinclair, senior, in the 100-meter breaststroke.

Also placing were Damian Cullom, Chadd Priddy, Dan Oyer, Sinclair, Curt Helmerick, and Brian Willoughby.

At State on November 18, the Lady Giants were led by Elizabeth Duncan, junior, who placed fourth and fifth respectively in the 200-meter and 500-meter freestyle. She earned 29 of the 40 team points.

Sectional champion in three events, Duncan said, "The way I see it, no matter how hard you have trained and prepared to get to where you are, when you get to that level of State competition, you've got to put that all aside and focus only on racing instincts."

Placing 14th in the 200-meter medley relay with Duncan, were Sophomore Donna Eddleman, Junior Kelly Reichwein, and Freshman Angie Williams.

Senior captain Tammy Hechinger, who took first in the 100-meter butterfly in Sectional and finished 25th at State said, "I think we had a successful season, especially the way our team pulled together at the end. However, at State our expectations were higher than our performances."

With Pike winning, the Lady Giants fell short of a Sectional title by only four points.

Team unity

"I like the closeness of the team. I have to give a lot of the credit to the coaches."

Elizabeth Duncan, junior

The two swim teams' seasons ended successfully. The girls team had three records in both County and Sectionals and finished with six State qualifiers. Jennifer Hendricks, girls swim coach commended the team: "We had a most unusual season; this year's team was very individually oriented."

Sophomore Donna Eddleman, voted Most Valuable Swimmer said, "I've been swimming since I was four. I swam in Swim Indy, which led me here." They completed their season with a record of 11-4.

"I feel that the boys had an equally successful season," said Gary Kinhead, boys swim coach. He believes, although the team lost a valuable combination of senior swimmers and divers, a great future still lies ahead due to a strong group of underclassmen.

Sophomore Matt Hinshaw broke the 200-meter individual medley, and the 100-meter backstroke, and Junior Chadd Priddy broke the 50-meter freestyle. "Though the teams did well on an individual basis, they worked even better as a whole. There aren't really any key athletes; swimming is a team sport. The key is everyone working together," added Kinhead.

This is the fifth time in a row that the boys team has won first in Sectionals. "I was very pleased by our performance; it was actually quite outstanding," said senior diver Curt Helmerick. Their season ended with a 10-4 record.

"After upsetting Brebeuf, we surpassed expectations. I feel we had an exciting and successful season."

David Lach, senior

Displaying diverse expertise, the 1989-90 boys basketball teammates contributed individual skills. Senior David Lach provided leadership and encouragement. Rebounding skills sparkled in Carl Hardy, senior, and Bruce McCain, junior. When a difficult opponent demanded serious defense, the Giants called on Claudius Garland and Marc Dickison seniors and Byron Jones and Antiwan Easley, juniors.

"Some of our toughest teams this year were Pike, Lawrence North, Marion, and Southport," stated Easley.

"We are a better all around team this year compared to last year, in rebounding defense and offense. The averages were even better this year," said Hardy.

"Togetherness is an important fact when working with more than one individual. We have a togetherness unlike last year's team. I think this team has a better mental preparation for the game," said Jones.

"It takes more than just good players to bring about good things. It takes hard work and responsibility," said Barnett.

The Giants also maintained a seven game straight winning streak, broken only by Decatur Central in a 68-65 game. The Giants ended the season beating Munice Central at the Hinkle Fieldhouse 62-52, and the season statistics shone at 15-6.

The boys beat Brebeuf in the Sectionals with the score of 65-54, but lost to the Pike Red Devils in a tough game.

"We got further than most people ever thought possible. We proved a lot of people wrong," said Easley.

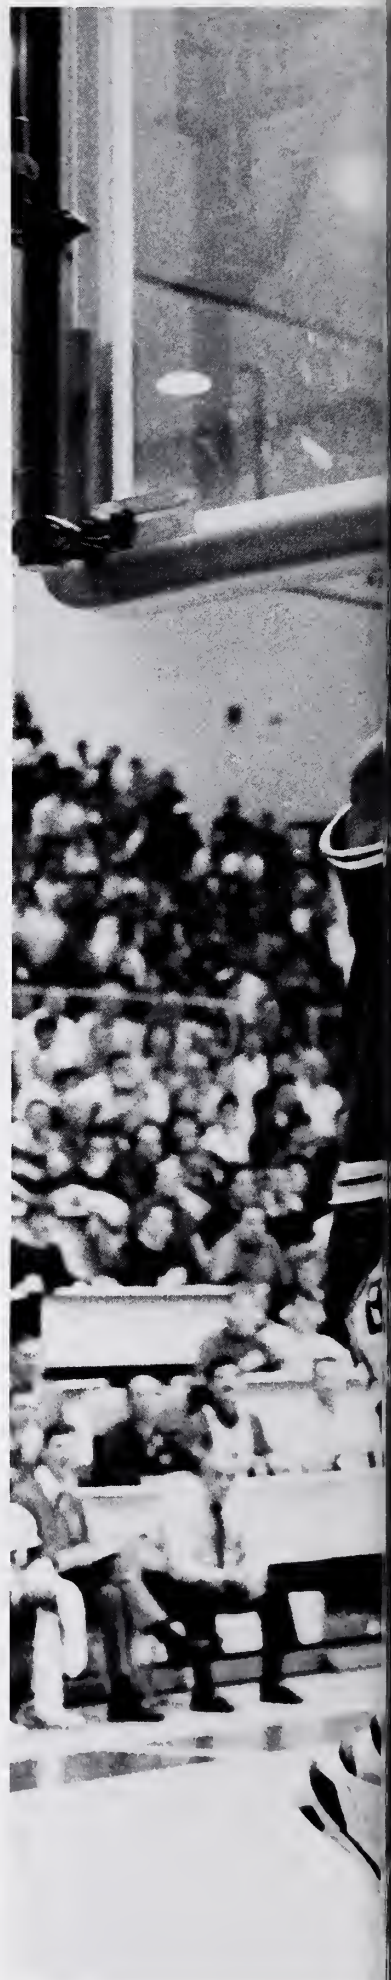

Coach Steve Witty stated, "The team played hard, smart, and together. They far exceeded people's expectations."

Wearing fluorescent shoes, t-shirts, and sunglasses, the girls volleyball team finished with a 15-15 season. The original slogan for the Lady Giants was "Our Future Looks Bright."

"Wearing the fluorscent clothes made us different and set us apart from the other teams. At times we felt pretty funny like when the other teams didn't know what our theme was and would ask us why we were dressed the way we were. In the end they understood," said Michelle Weesies, junior.

The teams skills advanced during the season as it went along. The coaches helped the team overcome problems and celebrate victories.

"The coaches are excellent athletes and have much experience in playing," said Becky Flannery, senior. "At times I don't agree with what they do, but I know it's for the best."

One problem which plagued the team was having a set line-up and sticking with it. "The 1989 line-up changed so much throughout the season, it confused the fans as well as the team," said Flannery.

"Although there were difficult times, the girls successfully overcame each obstacle and learned from the experience," said Krista Metheny, JV Coach.

Teamwork fostered great commitment and comradery. "When you're a team, everyone shares so much it doesn't matter what you do wrong. The players are not here to embarrass you. They are here to support you," said Michelle McFerrin, junior.

Key points

"The most embarrassing thing I did this year was slip and fall in the middle of a point."

Jason Reid, junior

Starting strong, the guys tennis team persisted with power and finished the season with a record of 15-3.

In unofficial rankings reported by Coach Joe Virgin, the team was reputed to be in the top 25 in the state of Indiana.

The outstanding individual in the singles division was #3 varsity player Sophomore Trent Bell. Ending with a record of 15-2, Bell was highly praised by Coach Virgin.

The #2 varsity doubles team of Juniors Jeff Monnier and Wally Smithers finished at 18-1. They lost only to state-ranked #1 North Central.

"I'm glad to see that the coach recognized us and watched us," said Smithers. "Hopefully, Jeff and I can improve next year and the team as a whole can win Sectionals."

This season the team posted an improved record and came closer to beating their Sectional nemesis, Brebeuf.

"This year's team did better than what I expected, considering we had no seniors on the team, only five juniors and two sophomores on varsity," Coach Virgin said. "Where the team goes from here has got to be uphill. We had a good record. Everyone expects us to do better next year."

Looking toward the 1990 season, Bell said, "We'll go well into Regionals, unless we come across North Central or Center Grove first. To me, they seem to be the hardest teams to play."

With their biggest win over Franklin Central, in County, 3-2 and their biggest loss to Richmond, 2-3, the girls tennis team, coached by Gary Mahoney, had a difficult season. Their overall record was 9-7. The #1 doubles team consisting of Michelle Weesies and Kelly Vargo had a record of 16 - 3.

"This year our doubles teams were really strong. They were the strongest doubles teams on record at Ben Davis, but, unfortunately, our singles struggled throughout the entire season," said Mahoney.

"I feel that as a team we had some very close matches and we should have won more of them. This was a extremely difficult season but with practice and experience, I believe that we will have a more successful one in the years to come," said Kristen Martin, junior.

Michelle Weesies was awarded the most valuable player and an All-State nominee. Kelly Vargo, the most improved player, moved from junior varsity to varsity and was an All-State nominee.

"This year has been my best season. Kelly and I worked great together. The thing I will remember the most is the closeness of the team and our team spirit," Weesies said.

Best finish

"Personally, I don't think that I lived up to my expectations, but that the team did."

David Smith, sophomore

With the best finish in BD golf history, this year's team went 12-0 in the season.

"Last year's record was great. But this year, it's fantastic," said Coach Bill Despres. "By far, this is our best finish."

The team won all the regular season matches and also took the County, Sectional, and Southport Invitational title. They placed second in Regionals.

"We have never won a County or Sectional before and placing tenth in state is much better than eighteenth like last year," said Despres.

Improvements and great scores came from both young and senior golf members.

"This has been a wonderful season," said Senior Matt Cornacchione. "You can't ask for more than an undefeated season and a trip to State."

Sophomore player, Trent Bell agrees, "The season went really good. Everyone put a big effort into the game and we played good as a team."

Individually, Senior Brian

Ott and Bell led the team with great finishes. Ott made first team All-County and Bell made second team All-County.

The golf team expects to have a great season next year too, according to Despres.

"Next year we will have seven returning players, including Erik Cooper and Bell, who starting playing as freshmen," said Despres. "Hopefully, we'll have even a better season next year."

"The first practice we went to I couldn't figure out how to put the tee in the ground."

Kim Curl, junior

"With a record of 4-9, the season was much improved over years past. We placed seventh in county and sixth in Sectionals," said Gary Mahoney, golf coach.

"We won more matches this year than the girls golf team has totaled in five years," exclaimed Julie Smith, senior.

"I feel we had a great season. We all did well and placed in Sectionals. We had fun together," said Wendy Phillips, senior.

Reflecting on embarrassing moments, Amie Gillihan said, "One of the funniest things that occurred this year was when Lisa Derlis and I finished at the wrong hole."

Senior Dana Shupe remembered the Brownsburg match. "The foursome I was in got lost on the course. About 30 minutes later, the coaches from both teams had to come look for us!"

Improvement of golf skills and a focus on team effort were emphasized during this season. "We learned about teamwork, something essential in life," said Kim Curl, junior.

Commenting on practice, Derlis said she practices whenever she can, "because golf is a sport that can be played for the rest of your life."

"Unfortunately, 8 out of the 10 players were seniors. I hope the success this team brought will interest younger girls in the sport," said Coach Mahoney.

"The combination of dedicated seniors and juniors with the sophomores this year was a nice mix."

The men's track team had the pressure to fill possibly the biggest shoes in BD track history.

Losing twelve to graduation, six who participated in the State meet, the team also lost two of the four members of the school record-holding 1600-meter relay team.

The 1990 team was not expected to touch the successes of the 1989 team. "It started off shaky, but midway through the season we looked as if we could be stronger than last year's team," said Bryan Huston, senior.

Finishing with 8-1 record, the team was ranked fourth in the regular season and won three major invitationals. They finished third in County.

Each season, the coaches want to peak their athletes for the State meet. Because of injuries, Senior Derek Wilham and Junior Orlando Ward did not qualify. The Giants advanced five athletes to State. In his second State meet, Senior Mike Hausman threw the discus. Finishing 11th were Senior Derek Means in the pole vault and Junior Jon Deal in the 1600-meters. Seniors Marc Dickison and Huston finished 12th and 6th respectively in the 3200-meters. Huston's second time at State, he scored the sole point for the team.

Although the outcome at State fell short, the athletes did not doubt their coaches. "It seems each of our coaches knows just about everything there is to know about the sport of track and field," said Andre Withers, junior. "And with that combined knowledge, as long as they stick with us and we do what they tell us, we'll keep being competitive throughout the years."

Our team was really young. Next year's team will be stronger with upcoming sophomores."

Jodi Harding, junior

The 1990 Lady Giants track team's performance was affected by a new program adapted for this year. Freshmen of all Wayne Township Schools were trained with the high school athletes.

"Freshmen girls were used for the first time at the varsity level which will definitely help in the future," said Coach Mark Montgomery, who was in charge of the freshmen program.

The team had tough footsteps to follow. Last year's team, which dominated over the Sectional site, had four seniors who contributed greatly to the team's success.

"Our team as a whole is very young this year," said Kim Freund, assistant coach.

With the loss of the four seniors, this year's team was very young and inexperienced.

"We were not expected to do well at all, but we had a really good year," said Sophomore Wendy Carter. Junior Kim Hocker and Carter advanced to the State finals placing 8th and 6th respectively.

With the team dominated by 13 juniors, 13 sophomores and 13 freshmen, who were able to compete at the varsity level, the team lacked senior leadership. With only four seniors, the season was in for a hard track from the starting line.

The meet record was 7-5, with three out of the five losses within reach for a win.

The team placed tenth in the Marion County championship, and runner-up in the Sectionals.

During the Sectionals, 11 students qualified for the Regionals.

Senior Debbie Portish said, "We knew in order to go further up the ladder, first we had to qualify, not necessarily place first. So that's what we concentrated on."

Junior LaVetra Thomas placed second in the 100-meter dash and third in the 200-meter dash. Hocker captured first in the 800-meter run. Junior Michelle Bryant placed second in both the 800-meter run and 1600-meter run. Portish finished second in the 3200-meter run. Alicia Swanson, junior, placed third in the 3200-meter run. Carter jumped high for first in the high jump. Freshman Melinda Kendall placed fourth in the 100-meter run. Also, the 1600-meter relay team of Hocker, Carter, and Sophomores Stacey Mondino and Evette Williams placing third to qualify to Regionals.

"Qualifying for Regionals was all that was on mind and we did it," said Swanson.

Once in Regionals the girls team qualified two competitors to State. Hocker, who captured a Regional championship, qualified in the 800-meter run. Carter also qualified in the high jump, placing 6th.

Individually, Portish captured a new school record running the 3200-meter run in 11:56.9.

Allowing the freshmen to compete at varsity level provided extra effort for team progress. With a larger team to work with and more practice, team members believe next year's season looks good.

"We're a young team and we'll be back next year," said Hocker.

Next year the girls track team is looking forward to being one of the top teams in the county.

Grand slam

"There's nothing hard about baseball as long as you play for the love of the game."

Donnie Beers, senior

Though the season ended short of goals, the baseball team still had a successful year finishing with a 24-9 record.

"Even though we lost only nine games, there were just some games that we should have won, but didn't," said Coach Dave Brown. "So, overall it was kind of a frustrating year."

Taking it one day at a time, paid off in the Sectionals for Ben Davis.

Defeating Speedway, Broad Ripple, then Pike for the Sectional title carried on the Giant tradition of winning.

"Winning the title was a great feeling," said third baseman Kelly Latimore, senior. "Speedway was an easy game, but Pike was a little tougher."

But when the going got tough, the tough got stronger and held off to win 2-1.

The strength of the players came mostly from within themselves and their desire to win.

"I push myself, like others, to excel," said Latimore. "I see myself doing well and I keep practicing so that I perform well."

While baseball continues to be an American pastime, it is a sport which a player enjoys to be a part of.

"I play baseball for Ben Davis pride and personal pleasure," said Senior Bobby Osborne.

Senior David Holmer, rightfielder, agrees, "The baseball team has a great tradition. We take pride in everything as a Giant."

Brown also stated, "Baseball isn't a sport like football or basketball that attracts many fans and the press. The players play for the love of the game and a lot of pride goes along with that."

Pride seems to be equivalent to the sport. Latimore continued to say, "baseball is a sport you play only if you really love the game, but pride is always my number one concern."

"Losing to Roncalli in the Regional was disappointing,"

said Senior Shawn Dean, catcher. "I felt devastated because we couldn't go further and it was the last game of the season with the whole team."

Though the season may be at an end, friendships are likely to stay together with this group of players.

"Even though the season is over, there's a few of us who will still get together and play some ball," said Holmer.

All the effort, fun and pleasure of playing baseball has its rewards.

On the brighter side, Osborne, in addition to being All-County, was named All-State and was a key player in the Giants successful season.

"I work hard on and off the field," said Osborne. "I try to make others the best they can be by playing a leadership role. For myself, I think I am the force that pushes me to excel for games. I love baseball and as long as I can play the game, I'm going to."

"The key to our success this year has been hard work, dedication, and team spirit."

Cyndy Jones, senior

Exceeding far beyond the expectations of fans as well as the team itself, the Lady Giants set their goals high and made it to the State finals.

"When athletes get together, they set goals to achieve throughout the season. The reason for setting goals is to have something to work towards. The success we had this year is because of the amount of work the team did together," said head coach John Clark.

The team huddled before every game to pray and prepare themselves to play. Together was the slogan the team used before games.

Senior Tracey Van Arsdol believes that the team also revolved around loyalty. "Everyone sought to do what was best for the team. No one thought about letting anyone down, no matter what it took."

Because the team relied on being one and working together, there were no superstars that carried the team. "We had a bunch of super, intelligent, young ladies who realized what they needed to accomplish, and that they needed to work hard to achieve their goals," Clark said.

This year's team, according to Clark, was unselfish. "The young ladies were more interested in working for the team as a whole, than looking good themselves."

Van Arsdol believes that this year's team was special because of its unity. "We were more than a team; we were a family. We worked together for the common good of our team. Instead of nine individuals, we were one unit."

"We played excellent softball at the end of the season, during Sectionals, and Regionals; that is the time we needed to peak. At the State tournament, we did not play to our potential; we lost to Eastbrook. That was my only disappointment all year," said Clark.

Because of rain, the first game of the State tournament was delayed; the Lady Giants were losing, 7-2. The team had a chance to come back the next day and start over, but that was not the case.

"I think the team was very nervous because we were inexperienced, never getting past Sectionals. I think we let the excitement and tension affect how we played," said

Van Arsdol. "I was excited and proud to make it as far as we did. I thought that we owed it to all our fans and ourselves, and I played to give it to them."

The Giants came back the next day and still could not pull through Eastbrook's lead, losing 12-2.

All the hard work throughout the season did pay off for most of the players. Sophomore Candi Lowe, Junior Mandy Murdock, and Seniors Rosie Alderson and Cyndy Jones all won Sectional honors. Jones and Alderson were also chosen for the All-Star team. Juniors Nicole Alsop, Michelle McFerrin, and Senior Tracey Van Arsdol were named Academic All-State. Senior Jennifer Latimer won All-State Honorable Mention honors and Jones was named to the first team All-State.

"This is the best group of seniors I have ever had," said Clark. "They were not athletically the best team that I have ever coached, but they worked together well. Even the seniors who did not play never quit being supportive; they gave 100 percent even during practice."

"My expectations for the team turned out better then I thought since this was my first year on the team."

Scott Aurs, sophomore

The Ben Davis varsity soccer team finished its regular season with a record of 8-2, the best in Ben Davis history. Most of the team credited its success to teamwork and dedication.

Improving from last year's mediocre record of 4-5-1 was a proud accomplishment for most of the team. "I feel that the season was a success, because we accomplished more than ever before," said Junior Kevin Mullins.

Some teammates believed that the team did better than expected. "We were much better than I thought," explained Junior Jason Reid.

Proud coaches and team members alike credited their improvement to many factors. Junior Jamie Nanny credited, "We had better teamwork than before. The guys worked harder this year. Plus we had many returners from last year."

However, the team did have disappointments throughout the season. "I was disappointed with our losses to Center Grove and Perry Meridian," said Junior Scott Frye.

Next year, the team will have most of the same starters. Graduating this year are MVP goalkeeper Rob Baker, David Crawford, K.P. Williams, and Jonas Rodrigo. The Giants hope to compete in the fall next year and go for the State cup.

Cheered up

"I love cheering because not only do you get to go to all of the games, but also you become a part of the team."

Tammy Saunders, junior

"Behind the strength of every great team, there always lies some person or group that supports it," said mat maid Stacey Miller, senior.

Mat maids and cheerleaders are selected each year to fulfill this role. "Along with the popularity and excitement these positions bring, there come hard work and responsibility," said cheerleader Jenny Leaf, senior.

"The most difficult part about being a cheerleader is going to camp," said Chris Monahan, senior. "We worked from sunrise to sunset on different cheers and chants that we were required to perform each night."

Although the similarity of cheerleaders and mat maids is to provide inspiration to fans and cheer the teams to victory, their support and leadership vary in many ways.

"Mat maids cheer the team on while sitting down on the floor, but cheerleaders stand up and jump around," said Allie Vash, junior.

Mat maids, assigned one or two wrestlers individually, bring food and decorate lockers before the meets. Both cheerleaders and mat maids are responsible for hall posters and wall decorations.

"The most rewarding moment of the season was being able to qualify for national competition in Dallas, Texas. It was the first time that any squad here had accomplished this," said Angie Smith, senior.

"Going all the way to the state competition stands out the most in my mind," said mat maid Shawnessy Osborn, junior.

"Being a cheerleader or a mat maid is hard work, but the fun, excitement, and memories make every moment worthwhile," said cheerleader, Natalie Carty.

what we've got Rite of Passage

As students progressed from a mere sophomore to a mighty senior, Ben Davis teens underwent a certain "rite of passage."

Beginning August 23, the sophomore journey through the building was for some like being in Siberia. As every year, some newcomers got lost at every corner and fretted over whether they had enough money to purchase the ever-famous "elevator passes."

"I think that the scariest part of being a sophomore at Ben Davis was the fact that the building is so big!" said Aysha Tredwell, sophomore. "The good part was we had more time to prepare for our future than the upperclassmen!"

Those straddling the fence, better known as juniors, had tasks of their own to achieve. Visits to college campuses and vocational schools helped juniors gain confidence in their serious decisions and plans for life after high school.

"We had so much to do during this year," said Bill Lawrence, junior. "There was a lot I still had to accomplish, if I wanted to relax my senior year."

"I think our junior year was so much fun, because now we were upper-classmen; we weren't considered the babies anymore," said Frank Wilson, junior.

Just as sophomores took the PSATs and CATs, juniors took the ISTEP and their first SAT.

When Prom approached, juniors experienced the usual stress inherent with asking someone for a Prom date. "Prom was more stress than fun in the beginning," said Wilson. "There was so much work that went with asking a girl to Prom. First she made you wait for an answer; meanwhile, you were sweatin' over if you had a date or not!!"

An academic tradition at Ben Davis recognized the juniors and sophomores in the top 50 of their class. In April these academic leaders were honored at a special breakfast.

Those on the brink of the "real world," better known as seniors, experienced a combination of excitement, apprehension, and intense fear.

"As seniors, we were moving on to bigger and better things, but we were also leaving some of our friends behind after graduation. It was hard sometimes," said Malinda Siders, senior.

No later than second semester, letters and transcripts were sent to colleges and the SAT was taken for the final time.

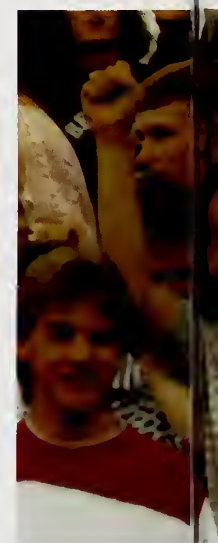

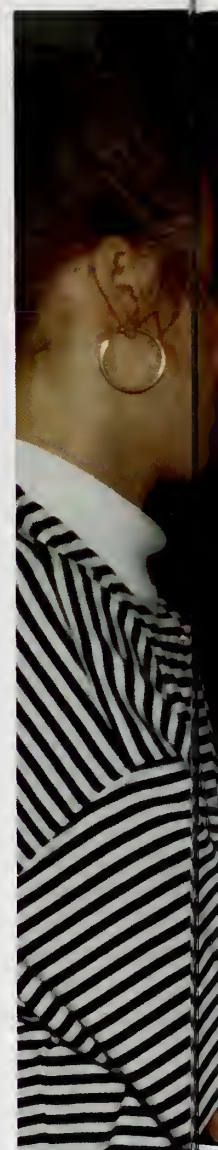

On April 30 at the Airport Hilton, the top 30 seniors were honored at a banquet. Each senior introduced the educator he or she designated as being of the greatest influence.

At the second annual Evening of Excellence in May, all seniors nominated by educators and named as scholarship recipients were honored in the auditorium.

"The Evening of Excellence was designed to recognize seniors who had academically excelled," said Gail Arvin, guidance.

At the end of this long journey, seniors knew Ben Davis halls like the back of their hands. Seniors now acted as the salesmen for "elevator passes." Most of all, they left with more of a sense of themselves and those around them, than when they first began their "rite of passage."

Twelve seniors lead class

Friends and rivals 'til the end, Thomas Tyson and Jonathan Dworak tied at the academic peak with a GPA of 4.6 on a 4.0 scale. These two share the honor of being named co-valedictorians of the 1990 class.

Having more than one valedictorian has only happened three other times in Dr. James Mifflin's history as principal at Ben Davis High School, which has brought a smile to his face, especially with Tyson and Dworak.

"I'm happy with them," said Mifflin. "They have worked extremely hard to be recognized not only by our school program, but also by the National Merit Scholarship Program."

The scholarship program for 1990 acknowledged this year's co-valedictorians and two other students, Brian Deiwert and Jennifer Price.

"This program is an external view of our high school program and shows that our students' excellence is recognized by more than just our program," said Mifflin.

Though Tyson and Dworak are very bright, intelligent, and respected students, not all of their time is spent with academic pursuits in mind.

"Jonathan exhibits a plethora of self-confidence in his ability to achieve and accomplish his goals, whether they are in school or out," said Warren Ross, counselor of Dworak. Ross added that Jonathan is very unassuming; most people would probably never know that he is very smart.

Tyson's counselor Denise Fisher notices a similarity in T.J. "One of T.J.'s neat qualities is that he is very down-to-earth. He seems to be able to relate to people on any level even though he's a very bright young man."

Though many people stereotype class leaders as bookworms or study hawks, this year's valedictorians are not all in the books.

"I don't have a scholastic lifestyle," said Dworak. "I never do any homework. I just figured out that if you show up and take tests, you get an 'A'."

Tyson and Dworak look to the future with realistic thoughts.

"Contrary to popular belief, being academic students does not guarantee a full ride anywhere," said Dworak.

"There's so much more to life than mundane schoolwork. I'm glad that I have been able to balance my work at school with outside interests and pursuits that are less stifling and prosaic. Education is fine, but you have to leave time for recreation, too."

Twelve leaders close high school with recognition, goals, and thanks for their achievements.

Motivating himself to co-valedictorian honors, Thomas Tyson said, "I don't feel pushed except by myself."

Sharing the same title with Tyson, Jonathan Dworak agrees. "The motivation was all me," smiled Dworak.

Other students acknowledge that they couldn't have done it by themselves. Many were inspired by success.

"God gave me the intelligence to succeed and the will to pursue; my father showed me what life and success were all about, and my mother challenged me never to give up until the goal was a reality," said David Wigington.

The undeniable efforts of others is evident in Phil Nguyen's life too.

"Though I have tried to push myself to success, my father has always stressed the importance of an education," said Nguyen. He added that he will always remember with education comes respect, responsibility, and power.

Education prepares one for the future. For Christine Croxall, her background in high school possibly lead her to school again.

"I am planning to go to college, pursue a career in either chemistry or Christian education," said Croxall.

Though college is coming up for these students, expenses can pop up too. Susan McFarland plans to attend Brigham Young University with some help.

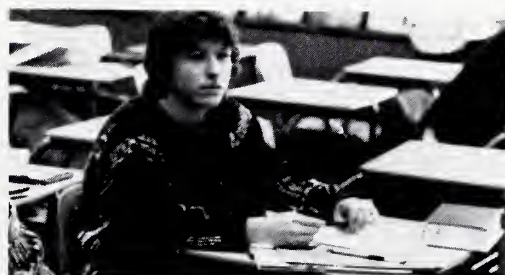

"I received the University Scholar Tuition award for $1,900 which will help," said McFarland.

Though going to college can be expensive, there are scholarship opportunities. For David Hynes, the Rose-Hulman Institution of Technology offered to help pay for his education. "Rose-Hulman has offered me a $2,000 scholarship so that I can try to get a mechanical engineering degree," said Hynes.

Scholarships prove the hard work dedicated by students, but with all the work, after so long it can get old.

Tracy Vanarsdol said, "Now it's time to get out, do something different, and move on."

Even with top students, school and studying can start to get old as their final year in high school closes some can be caught by the 'plague'.

"I'm thankful to be in the top, but I feel greatly infected by senioritis," said David Pasquale.

Though some start to slack off, in the end their past efforts show up. Jennifer Price said, "Over the past four years I have worked very hard. I'm happy that in the finish, my efforts have been worth it."

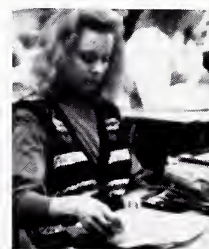

Accomplishments open doors for excellent students.

"I think being able to accomplish so much in high school has let me know that I can achieve other goals in the future," said Natalie Collyer.

Though everyone has set general future goals, some have even more for their future. "After school, I plan to do biological research, but most importantly I want to have a good family life when I marry and have children," said Robin Harper.

The future looks bright for the 760 seniors, with these 12 leaders who will lead the new decade in to another generation of success and prosperity."

what we've got The Early Birds

Although graduating in January is often seen as unwise for seniors, 84 students concluded that it would best suit their purposes.

"I decided to graduate early to go to Barbados for a while," said Abe Murphy. "I have a family friend who owns a construction company there. I'll be able to work for him, make some money for college, and enjoy the view." Missy Bohannon has other plans. Although undecided on a career, she does want to attend college.

"I do plan on going to college to major in business," said Bohannon, "but I also want to join the air force."

"Indecisiveness concerning careers is common among high school students," said Rosalie Leedy, counselor. "If a student is unsure of his future, postponing graduation until June is my advice to him. Why start working now? He has 50 years for that."

Although the seniors are eager to leave, a few told of things they will miss.

"Even though I'm excited about my future, I know that I'm going to miss Ben Davis, especially my friends," said Murphy.

Senior Kim Gross hands World and Olympic figure skater Christopher Bowman his protocol packet at Skate America hosted by Indianapolis skating clubs.

what we've got An Icy Inspiration

Lending a helping hand to famous international skaters led to a trail of gratitude and a beginning to new friendships for senior Kim Gross.

She pulled strings to work at Skate America, an international figure skating competition, from October 18 through 22 at Market Square Arena.

"I was extremely excited to find out that I was accepted to help. I've always followed figure skating and even skated myself," said Gross.

"It felt unreal to actually see these people in 'real life'," said Gross. "I meet Christopher Bowman and Mark Mitchell from USA. I even meet Viktor Petrenko from Russia."

Although it was just a polite greeting when she meet these skaters, by the end of the week she formed friendships and exchanged addresses.

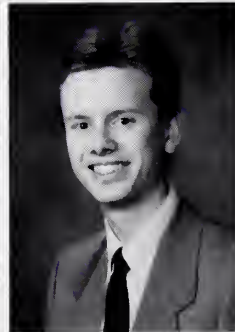

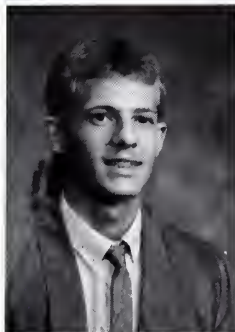

She now has a new appreciation for ice skating. Working behind the scenes as ice monitor, she was able to see all the hard work and dedication required of skaters.

"They all worked so hard to achieve their goals," said Gross. "It was inspiring."

What we've got I'm Sick of This...

When deep sighs of boredom are heard throughout Miss Jean Prichard's senior composition class, and when unfinished trigonometry assignments become the basis for Mr. Mike King's bickering, senioritis should definitely be considered.

"I believe senioritis is a sickness that overtakes about 99 percent of all seniors," said Mr. King. "After spring break it becomes fatal."

Characterized by exhaustion, lack of enthusiasm for the environment, and anticipation for the future, Mari Abdullah, senior, said, "I can't say exactly what it is, but I do know that it's making every day harder to face at Ben Davis. I remember running home to do my homework, now if it doesn't get done, who cares."

Besides homework, attitude is another symptom.

"About two or three times a week I have to put the 'no whining' sign up on the board," said Mrs. Patricia Schafer, music. "The seniors complain about everything. I guess they're just tired."

Senior Scott Stippich separates senioritis from boredom because "senioritis is the knowledge that after a few months these everyday routines will no longer exist."

What we've got Mirror Images

Many people cannot imagine seeing a replica of themselves without first having a mirror to look into. For others however, the idea of not having a double is inconceivable.

"The most enjoyable part about being a twin is that I have a sister and a best friend all in one. I'm never alone," said Malinda Resnover, senior, whose twin is Malissa Resnover.

This may not seem so unique to some, but when that sister reflects a mirror image it is.

"Malinda is the best thing that has ever happened to me," said Malissa. "Without her I would be lost. We do almost everything together."

As one might expect, mistaken identity is a frequent occurrence with identical twins.

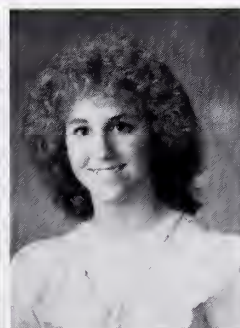

"The easiest way of telling Malinda and me apart is that she has a mole on her chin," said Malissa. "Most people don't know this; consequently, I get into trouble for a lot of things she does. Guys meet her and say they met me and I don't even know them."

"I don't think it's hard to tell Allan and me apart," said Eric LaVoy, senior. "Our hairstyles are so different that it's really easy. I have to admit, even my mom can get us confused when she's not paying attention."

what we've got Double That!

Popularity and personal gratification come with being a twin; however, there are some negative sides as well.

"There are a lot of ups and downs that go along with having a twin," said Craig Overton, senior, whose twin is Ken Overton. "Although I love my brother, I have to admit that there is a lot of competition and jealousy between us."

The probability of a twin bearing twins is quite high. "I think I have a good chance of fathering twins," said Bruce Marshall, senior whose twin is Brent Marshall, "but I wouldn't want to. Brent and I fight a lot."

Kim and Kenneth McGowan are fraternal twins and their role as brother and sister is quite different from identical twins.

"Usually when people think of twins, they imagine them dressed alike and always together," said Kim, senior, "but Kenneth and I never dress alike. Although we're close, we're not that close."

One might wonder if dates have difficulty choosing between twins. "Guys have a hard time choosing between us," said Malinda Resonver. "We are so much alike. I think they just close their eyes and pick, then bring a friend for the other one."

What we've got Presidential Classroom

Seniors T.J. Tyson and Phil Nguyen were selected by the Wayne Township School Board to participate in the Washington D.C.-based Presidential Classroom program. During Presidential Classroom, students learn how the federal government works.

The only full seven-day program of its kind, Presidential Classroom features seminars as well as an extensive visit to Capital Hill.

"The main benefit of Presidential Classroom for me was seeing our country's political machine up close," said Tyson.

"I was able to walk through a senator's office and see his aids writing speeches and answering his letters. I heard a lobbyist 'buying the ear' of a congressman, and I walked through Capital Hill where our national policies are formed."

"I believe that every student should have a chance to experience our government in action instead of just learning about it from textbooks," said Nguyen. "Presidential classroom was probably the highlight of high school. Not only did I learn about how my country works, I also made very good friends that will last me a lifetime."

What we've got Artistic Talent

In advanced art class senior Adam Leeds constructed a self portrait displaying his art-related future plans; the portrait was part of an assignment given by Larry Hurt, art. Hurt chose Leeds' portrait to represent the class's assignment in the attendance office.

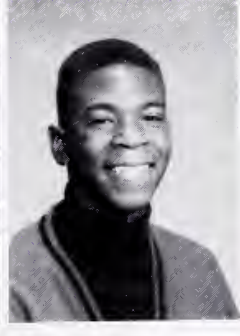

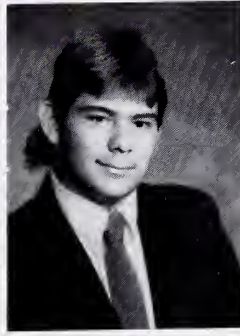

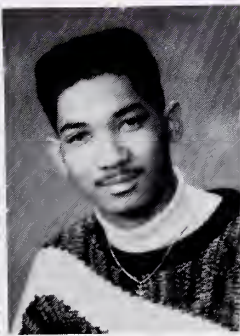

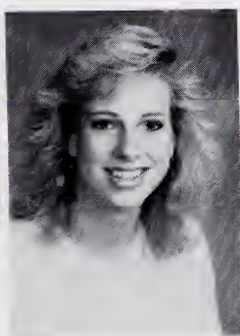

The class was given a minimal time lapse to complete the newly initiated assignment. Leeds believes that it would have been more complete had he had more time. He said, "Even though I have a short time to finish my project, it seems as though it took me forever."

Leeds, who takes painting and advanced art, chose the manner in which to do his assignment. He thought the photograph would best exemplify his artistic interests. In the photo he made its viewers understand his motivation for the assignment. "I decided to use an interesting photo technique to bring out the uniqueness in my future plans," Leeds said.

He plans to attend the Heron School of Art in the fall to study teaching. He hopes to become an elementary school art teacher. He said, "I have done well in art all of my life. If I am good at something, why shouldn't I focus on a career related to that?"

what we've got

A Familiar Place

When students walk out the doors of junior high school for the last time, there may be no hope of returning. That's why the administrators at Ben Davis Junior High started a new tradition.

On May 10, 1990, the junior high hosted a senior reception for seniors who once attended school there. "We basically wanted to see how the students had matured and where they were headed with their lives," said Nancy Tolson, Ben Davis Junior High teacher. Tolson, along with the principal, guidance counselors, and other teachers organized the event.

Senior Bo Holder was one of the students who attended the reception. "It was great," said Holder. "It gave me a chance to see all my old teachers before graduating."

Food was served, and music played, but the main purpose of inviting the seniors was to talk about past experiences and future aspirations.

"We plan on doing this for many years to come, making it a tradition," Tolson said.

Bringing plans together

Besides being the youngest in the school, the Sophomore Class of 1992 has something else special and unique about them. This class will be the 100th graduating class of Ben Davis.

They are calling it the "Centennial Celebration." Many people, including school board representative Mary McClelland, are helping plan this occasion.

"Throughout the year there are events planned to celebrate this distinguished time," said McClelland.

Among some of things planned for the 1992 year is having a 100 year logo. "Other ideas that were suggested through the committee were having a publicity billboard, tying in Arts Alive somehow, and having a special tassel and medallion for the students," said Dr. James Mifflin, principal.

Sophomores are excited about being in the 100th graduating class of Ben Davis.

"It's going to be exciting," said Sophomore Aaron Allen. "The class itself is awesome, but being the 100th class to graduate is going to be a 'party'."

And a party it will be. The class of 1992 will be treated with special recognition because of the notable event.

In addition to publishing the traditional yearbook, the Keyhole staff will produce a separate volume, "100 years at BD".

"We started planning the Centennial yearbook last May," said Janet McKinney, Keyhole advisor. "The 1992 book will be a two-volume book. The traditional volume will include an additional 16-page section of the Centennial year. The second volume will be a combination of who's who at BD and a historical record of our first 100 years. This is a unique journalistic opportunity and challenge."

Though the plans for the celebration are still in the planning stages, the committee has ideas to expand with other groups.

"There is a lot of pride in Ben Davis," said Jerry Holifield, assistant superintendent of Wayne Township. "Hopefully, we can involve the civic organizations and many adults to share in the celebration."

The year has many expectations for the 'Centennial Celebration' to be known and celebrated.

"We want it to be a nice celebration," said Holifield. "Ben Davis is well known and deserves the recognition of 100 years."

Many students try hard to succeed. As sophomores entering a new school, it may sometimes become hard to keep up with everyday activities; however, teachers nominated twenty-one sophomores as outstanding. Faculty voted and commented on the top twelve sophomores.

Chris Ings, one such student. "This kid plays three different sports at which he is very good; yet he is still a very strong academic student," said Dick Dullaghan, business.

Having high standards and excelling are qualities that these students portray.

"Stacey Mondino is an honest individual and sets morals for herself, let alone being a good athlete," said Julie Moster, English. "She also establishes a cheerful attitude which shows maturity."

For Todd Tyson, a variety of qualities are present. "He is not only an intelligent student, but also he shows outstanding qualities outside academics," said Laura Waalkes, foreign language. "What is great, is that he gives it his all also. He pursues many activities and does his best in everything."

Each student has her own unique quality. "Junko Mitome applies herself thoroughly and works hard at what she does," said Linda Hawk, math.

These students are far from being dull. "Eddie Slevin has a good sense of humor to add to his intelligence, and he is very well liked by other students," said Linda DeWitt, art.

Attitude is another key factor.

"Jennifer Zimmerman is a bright student and also extremely polite and courteous," said Laura Geckler, foreign language.

Being involved with different activities and sharing time with others brings out that role model.

"Kelly Tabor has excellent character, intellect," said Martin, foreign language. "She has a special gift studies, part of her for learning, simply enthusiastic her studies."

Learning is definitely what is in store for Samuel Baughn. "Sam is the only sophomore who is doubling up in science and taking both enriched chemistry and physics, which is extreme dedication," said Walt Davis, science.

Dedication for many is a key to their success and growth. "Nick Mitsis's enthusiasm and energy is second only to his dedication to improve as a journalist and become a more well-rounded individual," said Janet McKinney, English. Dedication comes from hard work, whether it be academically or athletically.

Athletes are good role models too. Matt Hinshaw plays varsity tennis and is on the varsity boys' swimming team.

"Matt excellent athlete as well as out of 855, means the kid his time well a success," Dowell, so-exhibits athletic ability being 15th which can manage and still be said Nelson social studies.

Donna Eddleman is another student worthy of recognition.

"Donna has received a lot of recognition, but she doesn't ask or expect 'special privileges'. She is a wonderful role model to have in class," said Jenny Hendricks, physical education.

The wheel of fortune contestant also demonstrates dedication and an attitude for others to follow.

"Royce Smith works so hard. He is an outstanding student and individual. I could see him dictatorian," said Bobance.

In addition to being BD faculty students were a majority teachers and faculty to be named as outstanding students in different areas of school life.

What we've got Getting Out of Class

As juniors, coming up with new excuses to get out of classes was easier the second time at Ben Davis.

"I asked the ones that I could communicate with," said Veronica Sloan, junior.

Popular requests include going to the bookstore, getting a drink, seeing the nurse, turning the car lights off, and locating a purse or book.

Finding unusual excuses was a hobby for Matt Dean, junior. One he used frequently was, "I have to go to the bathroom to wipe the juice off of my ingrown toenail."

Females may escape more easily. Michonne Sims, junior, shares, "All I did was say that I needed to see the nurse. If the teacher said 'no', then I said it was a personal problem. Male teachers were easier than females."

Eric Marcov, junior, pleaded, "I left my retainer on the lunch tray. Can I go get it?"

What we've got Making Plans Early

To juniors, becoming a senior represents superiority. With becoming a senior, a student inherits privileges, as well as responsibilities.

"Becoming a senior will give me a new perspective on life. I am hoping that I will be able to better myself for the 'real' world," said Junior Kimberly Prince.

"I am looking forward to graduating so after high school I can get on with the rest of my life," stated Randy Graves, junior.

Being with friends for the last time is an experience most juniors dread. "I'll see some of them during the summer, but not all of them," said Junior Brandon McKee. "Being with them my senior year will probably be the last time we see each other."

The most important thing for Junior David Davis is, "I finally get the chance to make all of my own decisions."

what we've got Find a Place to Park?

One new adventure for juniors each year is fighting for a space in the parking lot. Tonia Wessel, junior, said, "The parking lot is an abyss. It's easy to get into, but tough to get out of."

Junior Erik Latimore agrees, "Leaving here is like trying to get into the track on race day, only worse."

Juniors learn to deal with it; some even try to park in the same space daily. Junior Ty Fleeheartly said, "There is this pole in the middle of the lot I always park beside. There is something about the pole that makes me secure."

Other juniors change their spot for a demanding senior. "I parked in the same spot daily—second row, third slot. One morning, in my space, was a red sports car with a long-haired hipster in it. I honked my horn for him to move, but instead he got out and threatened to activate my dental plan," Junior Tammy Cleary said. "I found another favorite space."

what we've got Farewell My Love

During high school, students are in the stages of dating. Teens seize this chance to know one another and to understand what dating is all about.

"Dating is to get to know each other's dislikes and likes, and if they like the same thing, that is the person," said Brian Scott.

For juniors, though, it is a little bit tougher, especially in dating seniors. Graduation could mean losing a boyfriend or girlfriend to college or a job out of state.

"I'm going to miss him when he leaves, because it's like I've grown to know him so well that he's become one of my best friends. I'll have trouble telling him that because I hate good-byes, but he means a lot to me," said Alicia Swanson.

Following lives of their partners is a big concern for these young adults. They must decide if they will follow their boyfriends and girlfriends to college, or whether they'll continue a separate direction. "I have my plans for my future, and he has his. If they work together, then great," said Jennifer Dodd.

what we've got Caught in the Middle

Juniors may question, "Where do we stand?" Sometimes eleventh graders even feel like they're stuck in the middle of two dominant groups, and left out of the excitement.

"In some ways I think juniors are ignored because the sophomores get attention because they are new. Seniors get attention because they're leaving," said Shannon Dunkin.

"I feel that the sophomores look up to me and when they need my help, I always try to give it. Most everyone treats each as an equal," said Junior Cathy Cox.

Classes are not as different for seniors as juniors. "No! It just depends on how you apply yourself. But then again, as you go further, there's a lot more to learn and experience. It depends on how you handle it," said junior Susan Falconer.

Next year's seniors don't plan to treat underclassmen as inferior persons. "No, it's stupid and pointless. If you pick on people, it's because of who they are and how they act."

What we've got Just Send Me Roses

Though the world has its times when everything is hectic, somehow a friend can make it better.

"A friend of mine gives me roses. When I give him something small, he acts like it's a big deal," said Shannon Soares, junior.

Students choose their friends for many different reasons.

"My friend and I spend our time laughing or just having a good time. She treats me like a human being," said Dayla

Special feelings come in many different shape, sizes, and reasons.

"My boyfriend makes me feel special because he's interested in things that I like to do," said Cory Bowman, junior.

"It makes me feel special when someone has a problem, they trust to come to me and tell me what is wrong," said Alyson Alford, junior.

Striving to endure tradition

Carrying on the tradition of excellence at Ben Davis will involve dedication and will. But, with the Class of 1991, there shouldn't be a problem in any area.

"The present Junior Class has worked hard in the off-season of football, as well as the actual season to make themselves stronger than any other team in Ben Davis football history," said Dick Dullaghan, business.

In order to continue the excellence that has been established in sports and other school-related areas, the students definitely need to exemplify good academics, sports and citizenship throughout the school year.

"My general impression of the Junior Class is that the class has potential of being as strong as any class we have had at BDHS," said John Schwegman, English chairperson.

Having tough competition from previous years could prove hard for another class to uphold the tradition; however, many believe this class has the talent and will power to surpass any limitations.

Though the Junior Class has yet to show Ben Davis what they have, "the Class of 1991 must be mature and learn the rules of the school society", according to Nelson Dowell, social studies.

"This class has within its ranks many students who have demonstrated strong qualities both in the academic arena and in the area of activities," said Schwegman.

Through the conscientious effort of the Junior Class, providing a positive character and demonstrating responsible leadership are key factors in determining how this Junior Class will carry on the tradition of excellence at BD.

Though all positive characteristics add up to the excellence of one school, everyone's view point of excellence is different. Some might say it is superiority or of exceptional merit; however, the most important in a school environment seems to be pride of the students in their school.

"Of course, there are many qualities the student body can possess to have school excellence, but one must, above all, care about the school and himself," said Dowell.

For excellence to continue at Ben Davis High School, the seniors in the Class of 1991 must dedicate themselves to being the best possible students they can be.

Total school involvement, positive attitudes, great academic standings, and a role as good citizens are all part of what makes up students like Kryste Cherry, according to Priscilla Dillow, assistant athletic director.

"Michelle McFerrin is in the top 50 of this Junior Class which is quite an accomplishment considering that she is a member of the basketball team and has a job too," said Julie Moster, English.

Not many students accomplish so much and keep such an admirable attitude as well.

"Stephanie Cloud's enthusiasm in all areas is exciting," said Bob Britt, athletic director. "She doesn't wait to be asked; she always is eager to help and please."

Gifted students like this help add an inspiration to school life and they help enhance the environment and the people in it around them.

"Becky Edwards has an exceptionally insightful and creative mind," said Bill Gilmartin, foreign language. "The talent that is portrayed in this girl is overwhelming. What is even better is that she shares that with other people. People notice her activeness."

Involvement in many areas help create a rounded student. Sarah Gradek shares part of her time by being a page editor for the Spotlight. Her senior year she will serve as co-editor of the Spotlight.

"It was obvious in the first weeks of journalism class that Sarah had the potential to be an outstanding leader and role model for publication staff members," said Janet McKinney, English.

Students who show these qualities are one's after whom many like to pattern their lives.

"Kim Hocker provides a good example for other students," said Candy Sutherland, English. "She has a balanced lifestyle, not only pursuing academically but also excels in athletics."

Having social awareness and seeing the need to do what is right is all part of being a leader in school, like Susan Falconer.

"Susan is a conscientious student who cooperates with class members and also helps lead them in activities," said Marge Patton, home economics.

Such scrupulous and thorough-minded people help the environment of the average classroom.

Seminar Proves Helpful

"The Hugh O'Brian Conference is a leadership seminar. Ben Davis selects students to attend who have shown strong leadership qualities," said Sally Klingerman, guidance.

Chosen to attend this year's local conference are Natalee Howes, Stacey Cross, Charles Johnson, Mara Lawler, Matt Hinshaw, and Trent Bell.

Ben Davis students have remained active in the program. Senior Dave Wigington, hosted the local conference last year.

Junior Kama Cunningham, attended the state conference and was chosen as the alternate to represent Indiana in the international seminar.

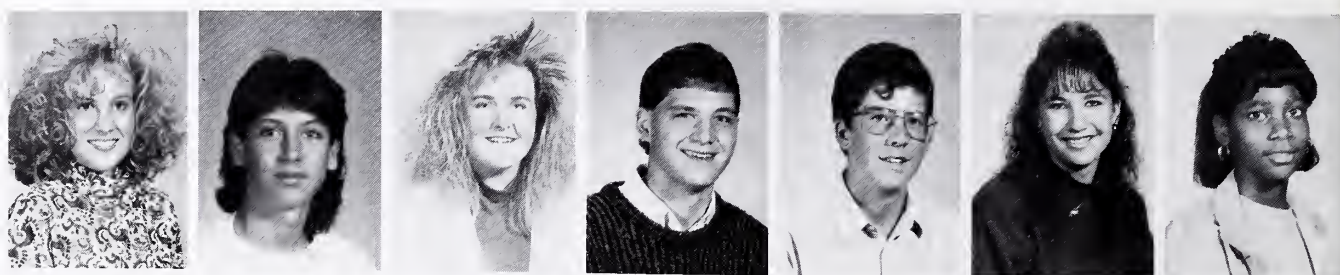

Lawler was chosen as the May 1989/90 state representative. "I'm so excited. I'm looking forward to meeting so many new people."

Collyer said, "If you ever have the chance to go or be involved with Hugh O'Brian, then do."

what we've got Warner Meets Challenge

Rather than participate in school sports, some take time to find sports activities outside of Ben Davis. One such sports enthusiast is Sophomore Brian Warner.

Warner plays on the Indiana All-Stars Hockey League for Indianapolis.

"I have participated about four years in hockey," said Warner.

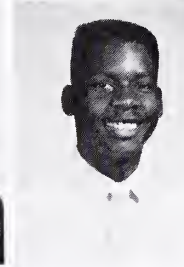

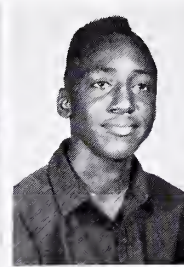

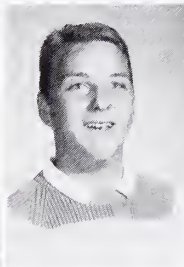

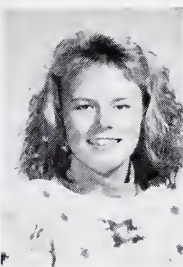

The Indiana All-Stars team practices twice a week at the Indiana State Fairground Coliseum. "About two-thirds of the team players are from Carmel, Lawrence North, Brebeuf, and schools from the East and Southside," Warner said.

In city-wide competition, "The league usually averages around 500," Warner said.

Warner has found several benefits to playing league hockey. "I have learned about high school competition and making friends from other schools in the All-Stars," Warner said.

"Big money! big money!" Sophomore Royce Smith said as he took a spin at the wheel.

On Sunday, November 5, 1989, Smith flew to L.A. to tape the Christmas Teen Week special for the 'Wheel of Fortune.' "I had wanted to be on the show since early childhood," said Smith.

Being chosen for the show was difficult. "A group of 600 was broken down into six groups of 100," said Smith.

After being called on October

30, 1989, Smith was asked to fly down for the show. "Contrary to what many people think, expenses in L.A. such as airfare and boarding are not paid for by the show," said Smith.

Top score for the week belonged to Smith who won a total of $15,936.93 on the show.

"Perhaps the friends I made and the support I received from my friends and school made it worthwhile," said Smith.

What we've got Practice Helps on SAT

Students must take the SAT to get into college; the first step in doing so is the PSAT.

Sophomores had the opportunity to become involved with after school help sessions for better PSAT/SAT scores. Karen Bennett, English, and Linda Hawk, math, took over sessions.

"The sessions, verbal and math, are designed to increase opportunities for scholarships including the National Merit Scholarship," said Sally Klingerman, guidance. Also, Improvements can be made in test taking skills and spoken and written vocabulary. During sessions, students took actual SAT tests for practice purposes.

Students were expected to stay after school twice a week for this program. "Anything to help me is worth my time," said Sophomore Dan Newberry. "Even if it raises my scores by 50, it is great."

what we've got Guard Adds Excitement

The Ben Davis Guard, along with the marching band, has established a reputation of being an award-winning guard.

Comprised of freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and seniors, the group followed a pattern of rank. After junior high band directors and friends in high school informed them, freshmen began as guard sisters.

Tami Graves, sophomore, said, "Mr. Ash at Fulton told me about it during our summer band practice."

In the beginning, guard sisters

Chi Perry, sophomore, said, "By being a guard sister, I already knew the basic stuff about drill and had some experience with the flag."

Guard sisters performed during the State field show, but also assisted with critical set-up during the show.

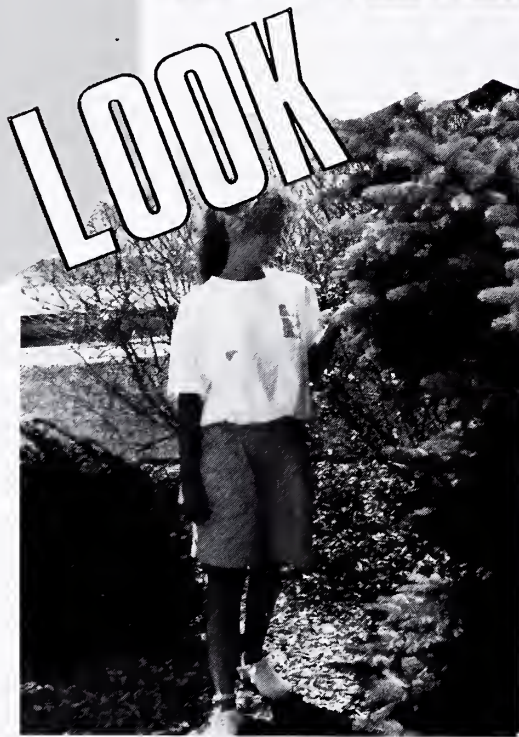

Emily Warren, sophomore, said, "Even though I had a part in the field show, most of the season there were times that I only set flags out for the guard."

As the ozone layer deteriorates and the landfills become overcapacitated, it's up to today's youth to make tomorrow possible.

Sophomore Barbie Barnholzer is doing her part to save the dying planet. "I think it's important for teenagers to save the environment. I want it to be safe for our families," she said.

She does several "little things" that may lead to a successful earth clean-up.

"Carpooling is a good way to save gas, plus it cuts down on exhaust fumes released into the atmosphere," she said. "You can also save five gallons of water by simply turning the water off while brushing your teeth."

"The average American doesn't do anything about a problem until it's too late," said Barnholzer. "It's time we started thinking about what we're doing in relationship to our future."

what we've got Striving to be the Best

To achieve lifetime goals, sophomores learned early the value of hard work and a dedicated attitude in the classroom and activities.

"If you can motivate yourself to be the best at school work, you can motivate yourself to do many difficult tasks. Also it pays off in good grades," said Sophomore Brian Coss.

Motivation by others, especially parents, can really make things happen.

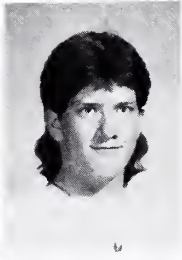

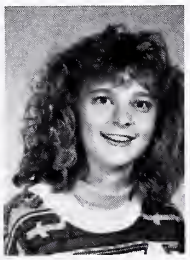

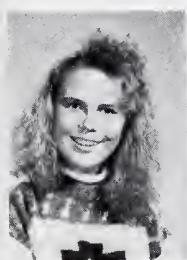

"My parents influence how hard I work because they've always told me that what I do in school now, will directly influence my future," said Sophomore Suzanne Graves.

Consistency becomes the key to performance and attitude. Students find out when they are young that goals are not accomplished with great ease.

"I learned at an early age that if I wanted something in life, I had to get it myself," said Sophomore Michael McLaughlin. "This helps me in reaching the goals I post for myself."

What we've got Optimists Offer Contest

The Optimist Club offered a speech competition. Larry Highbaugh and Max McQueen, debate and speech coaches respectively, selected Sophomores Michelle Barns, Todd Tyson, Royce Smith, and Crystal Wilson to represent Ben Davis at the competition. Smith won and advanced to the State level.

"This year's topic was, 'The Dream is Alive.' The topic was decided by the Optimist International organization," said McQueen. An Optimist speech takes time just like any other speech, "I like the students to brainstorm the topic and organize everything before they present the speech," said McQueen. Barns learned many new speech techniques by participating in Optimist. "I learned the 'notes' of giving a speech. I drew last and made the final impression on the judges."

"There's not a lot you can do. If you just stick with your friends and have confidence, then you'll be fine."

what we've got Flying Sparks Interest

Since they were young, Sophomores Jason Creager and Dave Whitesell have wanted to fly airplanes.

Beginning with boy scouts and then on to an aviation exploring program at Speedway Airport, Creager and Whitesell plan to put in enough hours to earn their pilots license.

"When you're flying you feel that nature is on your side. It is a great feeling," said Creager.

"When you take off, your mind focuses on the power that

Although flying has risks sometimes resulting in airplane crashes, Creager believes "Many of those crashes are pilot error."

With the aid of a few clubs, corporations, and adult sponsors, Whitesell and Creager are currently in the process of building their own experimental aircraft.

What we've got Class Chooses Leaders

Being elected to a class office is an accomplishment that only four students can achieve as a leadership goal.

Any student can try for an office. "I did it for a last minute fun decision," Erik Cooper, vice president, said.

"To be a candidate, a student needs 50 supporting signatures, a B average, and an advisor's signatures," Sophomore Kristen Berstein said.

During a convocation students presented speeches. "I feel as if the elections for the officers went very well," Sophomore Stacey Mondino, secretary, said. "Some of the speeches were even humorous. I think that the elections ran smoothly. There were no hard feelings and nothing slanderous was said about other candidates."

Berstein intends to give elections another try next year. "I didn't want to be a dictator, but a voice of our class for everyone to hear, a leader."

what we've got O'Neal Appreciates Life

For some, leading a healthy life is taken for granted, but not by Sophomore Shaun O'Neal.

As a leukemia patient for two years, O'Neal was forced to spend second semester at the Hutchinson Cancer Research Center in Seattle.

On May 10, O'Neal was greeted at the Indianapolis International Airport by family and friends. "You never realize how much you miss being home and miss friends until you've been away for six months," said O'Neal.

"I was very happy that this was finally over," said O'Neal. "Everything is going to be great. This is just the beginning of many stepping stones to recovery."

O'Neal hopes to return to school as a junior in January 1991.

With athletic goals in mind, during the summer O'Neal worked and took advantage of his free time. "I want to be on the golf team at school. During the summer, I worked and practiced even more golf," said O'Neal.

what we've got Students Assist in Office

As an alternative to study hall, students may work in the main or guidance offices.

Students have an opportunity to be helpful rather than be bored with extra time.

Sophomore Eulan Huntsman said, "A teacher asked me when I was in study hall."

As far as duties, there are many things to do and learn. During second period office student assistants are kept busy organizing attendance sheets for Marylou Pearson. Seated at a table next to Dr. Mifflin's secretary, Mary Ann Williams, students are always "on call" for errands.

Sophomore Mike Messer said, "I run passes to other classes and deliver papers."

Working in the office has its advantages. "It's helped me to know my way around the school better than most people," said Messer.

What we've got Cycle Travels for Cox

Kenneth Cox, health, retired this year from 33 years of teaching basic health classes and 24 years coaching the boys baseball team.

Cox, 62, was born and educated in Kentucky, attending high school at West Point. He then went to Georgetown and Indiana Universities, also playing professional baseball seven years with the Cardinals and Dodgers.

From 1963-87, he coached the Giant baseball team, winning 11 semi-state, regional, and sectional championships, taking a state title in 1981 when he was named the Indiana All-Star Coach. In 1988, he was inducted into the Indiana Baseball Hall of Fame.

Also teaching health education, he believes that his students appreciated his open classroom setting. "I liked being the median for student information. They appreciated it when I explained to them how to maintain health," he said.

Now retired, Cox plans to help his wife in their booming boxer shorts business. "I would like to travel around the country enjoying the rest of my life," he said. Cox owns a BMW motorcycle. "Probably the best part is that I can spend more time on my motorcycle now."

what we've got Time for Travel, Family

Exchanging administrative duties for retirement, Assistant Principal George Dickerson cleaned his desk, ending his six years of instruction, a fragment of a 40 year teaching career.

Dickerson graduated A.H. Parker High School in Birmingham, Alabama, in 1943. There, he played football three undefeated years. After high school, Dickerson served two years in the army and received his masters degree from Butler University.

Dickerson has taught in Alabama, Virginia, South Carolina, Indiana, and Germany, with military leadership experience.

From his years at Ben Davis, Dickerson promotes his patience as the key to reaching problem-med students. "I try to allocate my time to finding the source of the student's disciplinary problem," Dickerson said. "When I find the problem, we talk and work to find a solution."

Now retired, Dickerson does not have concrete plans, but asserts that he will spend his time productively. He said, "I want to travel, work on my garden, finish the basement, and enjoy family time with my children, grandchildren, and my wife Olivette."

After 15 years with Ben Davis High School, Bruce Hamman said goodbye to coaching sports and instructing English.

In 1952, Hamman began teaching health and physical education at Washington High School, also coaching football, track, basketball, and wrestling.

Hamman believes coaching is the way he stayed involved with his students.

"I can never forget my many memorable moments as a coach. I will miss the team and coaching it," Hamman added. "I have loved it here."

Hamman coached throughout Indiana until 1975, when began his instruction at Ben Davis. Since then, he has taught English and coached football and girls tennis.

Now retired, Hamman will spend time with his wife, Carol, and their three grown daughters living out of state.

Although he will no longer teach English, he plans to continue pursuing his adult English education. Hamman plans to travel to Canada to enjoy the Shakesphere Festival where he will further his private education about Shakesphere's life as a writer.

HELPING OTHERS

Students participate in various organizations to help those who need them the most. Community service, fundraising and donations are all a part of BD club spirit.

"Every year, since 1979, the Ben Davis Latin Club has chosen a worthy cause to support either by financial contribution or by volunteer services," said William Gilmartin, sponsor. The Latin Club has contributed to various functions which include The Ronald McDonald House at Riley Children's Hospital and The Salvation Army.

"Most of our projects coincide with the Christmas season," said Gilmartin, "but, in 1983 we took part in something really special."

That Thanksgiving, Club members set up an ice cream parlor in the lobby of Riley Hospital. Cones were served to patients and staff members who couldn't go home for the holidays.

"In the course of about two hours, just about every child, some pulled in little wagons, came down for a free ice cream cone," said Gilmartin.

In 1989, the entire student body had a chance to participate in a special project headed by DECA. All grade levels competed in the holiday link sale. Each grade contributed money to donate to the United Christmas Service Fund, the junior class came out on top. A combined sum of $600 was donated.

A project hosted by the Spanish National Honors Society, was a night of movies with a $1 admission fee. All proceeds went to the Peace Corps in Honduras.

Often, the ones who need the most help, are those close to home. Sophomore Shaun O'Neal received the support of peers prior to his trip to Seattle, Washington, for a bone marrow transplant. DECA sold 3300 blow-pops, thus contributing $500 to his cause.

"We sold suckers for three straight days and got quite a turn out," said Susan Land, sponsor. The Latin Club also participated in raising money for O'Neal.

Student Human Relations contributed a helping hand by hosting their first annual fashion show, "Stars of Fashion," in the auditorium on Saturday, April 14. A sum of $232.50 was accumulated and will go toward a scholarship fund for one of its members next year.

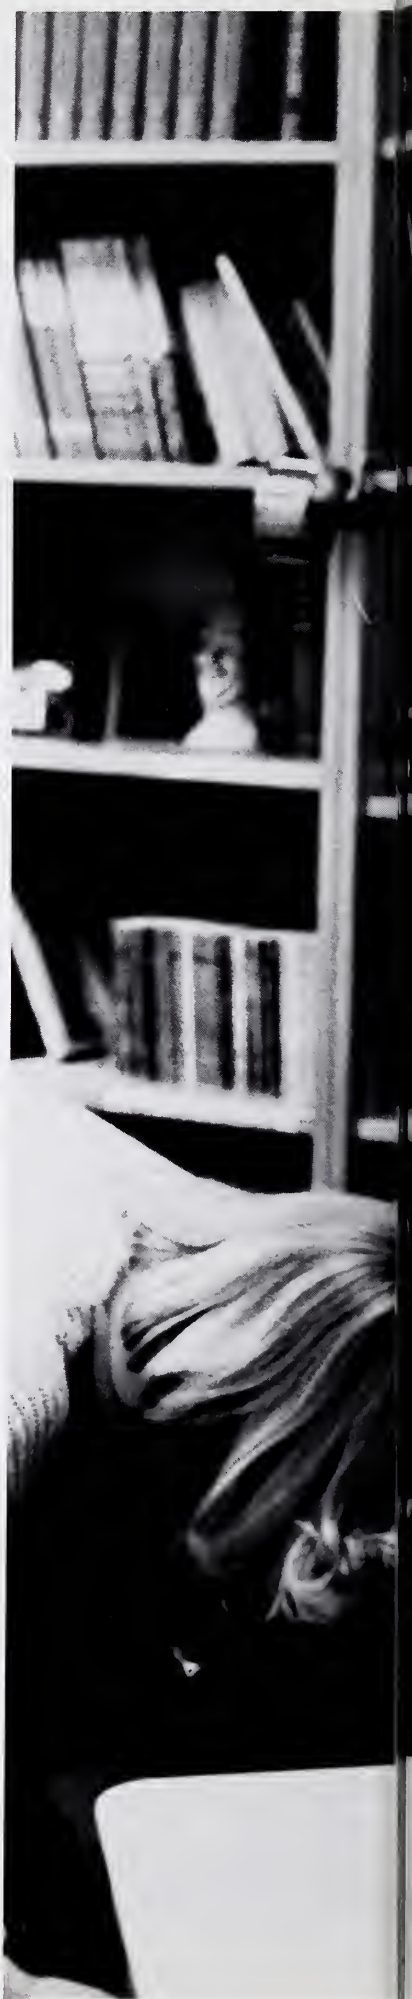

"It was a lot of hard work for us, but it was definitely worthwhile," said Teresa Middleton, sponsor.

The National Junior Honor Society continued its decade-long tradition of peer tutoring to help students better understand the subjects causing them trouble.

"This program has gone on for about eleven years," said Jean Prichard, sponsor, "Students benefit from it a lot."

BD clubs displayed concern to help many people in need get the things they deserve.

ROLL WITH IT

"The bowling league is more than a club. It's a place where we go to have fun, receive a challenge, and meet new people," said Sophomore John Doughty. "I've been involved for three years. I've met a lot of new friends and have learned a great deal from them."

Sponsored by Carl Nelson, the intramural league has two seasons a year. This year's first semester season consisted of nine teams. The first place team included Junior Tony Holland, Senior James White, and Sophomore Kenny Garland, calling themselves the Nike Crew.

Second semester, bowlers completed the season with a team called R.I.P. placing first. Team members were Juniors Matt Cunningham, Jeff Rowsell, and Tonia Wessel.

In charge of the bowling league for two years, Nelson would like to see Ben Davis bowl against other schools in the future. He believes students are quite serious about the teams and stick to the practices and games.

"Bowling on a league was a new and different experience, especially because it's a team sport rather than an individual sport," said Junior Drew Crowley.

Both groups ended the season with banquets. Serious and humorous awards were given to appropriate winners.

The Coaches Award winners were those individuals who made significant positive contributions to the club during respective seasons. Recipients were Seniors Rosie Alderson, Glynda Day, and Sophomores Kenny Garland and Robin Sample.

Nelson said at the April banquet students were already asking about next year's schedule.

STRIKE A POSE

After investing 1500 hours of time to practice hair coloring, cutting, styling and various other skills, the Ben Davis cosmetology students are ready for the "real world."

"The cosmetology vocational program allows our students to prepare themselves for a career, while going to high school at the same time," said Jean Erbecker, cosmetology advisor.

"Plus, if they want to go to college at the same time, they can earn money from the skills they have gained here," said Erbecker.

The program operates from House of James Beauty Collge on Sixteenth Street. Erbecker said that due to limited amount of time and space, only a set number of students are accepted to the program. Each student has her own station where she performs work on mannequins.

Instructional orientations teach methods of perming and coloring hair, as well as techniques of nail care.

Senior Stephanie Ballard said, "It gets me away from school; besides it's giving me a career."

Cutting hair and learning different and new techniques intrigued Senior Cheryl Groce. "By the time I graduate, I will have enough experience to make it in the real world," she said.

Decisions to participate in the cosmetology program represent the attitude of some students to plan beyond high school years.

"I got involved because I wanted a career that I liked after high school," said Senior Lori Beck.

LEARNING BUSINESS

Having a Christmas food drive, sponsoring suckersales, selling Entertainment '90 books and competing at District, State, and National conferences were a few DECA activities.

One thing DECA did this year was to help leukemia patient Shaun O'Neil. To earn money for O'Neil, members carried bags of blow pops to classes.

"We had sucker sales to donate $500 to him," said Junior Class historian Susan Falconer. "It is easy for me to relate to this because my fa-

Also, they recognized outstanding members of the group by hanging stars in a Hall of Fame.

"The most memorable moment for me this year was winning first place in Districts," said Junior Class reporter Heather Johns.

DECA also got a honorable mention at State. Junior Kama Cunningham placed in the top 22 at Nationals.

James Toney, one of the advisors to DECA, said that DECA had more fund raising projects this year due to the number of overall activities.

"DECA helps students develop and mature because they are involved in competitions and other projects. They learn to develop leadership skills and traits," said Toney.

Junior Michelle Blanchard said, "I was honored to be named DECA Student of the Week, because I felt like I did something special. I appreciated the advisors for recognizing me." Blanchard was one of 18 DECA students selected during the year.

Hey!

WHAT'S COOKIN'?

Vocational food service provided an eating option for students who chose not to eat cafeteria food for lunch. Prices were slightly higher, but so was the quality of the food.

"The food that we cooked was of higher quality, because we specialized in particular foods, such as certain kinds of seafood, and foods that you wouldn't find in the cafeteria-type setting," said Rich Bishop, foods instructor. "We served food comparable with restaurants."

zation has a lot more cooking than food for hungry students. The academic side of cooking has literally paid off.

"This year has been really good for scholarships," said Bishop. "This is the first year we've had this much money earned." Four students received scholarships for their achievements in the food service program. Juniors Petina Philpott and John Stingley received $500; Teresa Trusty, received $1000, and William Fields, $1,200.

Some special activities that the club members engaged in were field trips to various restaurants to get cooking tips and ideas. The Jazz Cooker in Broad Ripple, The Blue Irish restaurant and The Westin Hotel were three places visited. Students also attended a restaurant show.

"There was so much food there," said Samella Thompson, junior. "It was like a field trip—buffet style."

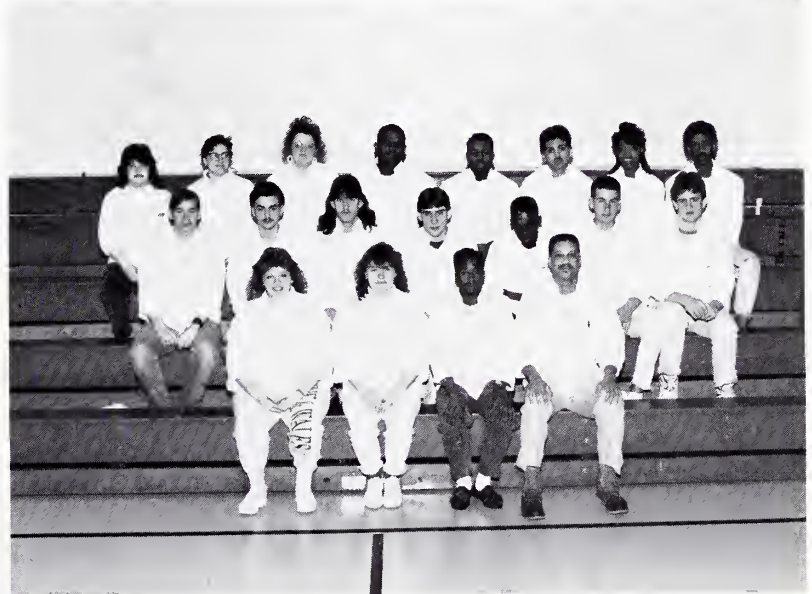

"The field trips gave the students a chance to see a variety of menus and cooking techniques," said Bishop. "It was really beneficial for everyone. Besides, the food was excellent!"

ACADEMIC ANSWERS

For the second time in three years, the Ben Davis academic decathlon team advanced on to the State finals.

The team, consisting of Seniors Brian Deiwert, Dan Bain, April Cook, Jennifer Price, Ryan Smith, Virginia Schnippel, and Juniors Andrew Hartsock and Ben Tryon, began preparing for the ten-event competition at the beginning of the school year.

The ten areas of competition included economics, mathematics, science, fine arts, social science, speech, interview, essay, language and literature, and super quiz.

Ben Davis hosted the 14-team Regional on January 20. Coach Carl Nelson said, "We were lucky to come out of such a tough Regional competition, even as a wild card."

Each event of the contest was divided into three divisions: scholastic, varsity, and honor with three students entered in each division.

"One of the more challenging events was the essay," said Nelson. Each student was required to read two novels and be prepared to answer any question in 50 seconds or less.

In reference to State, Junior

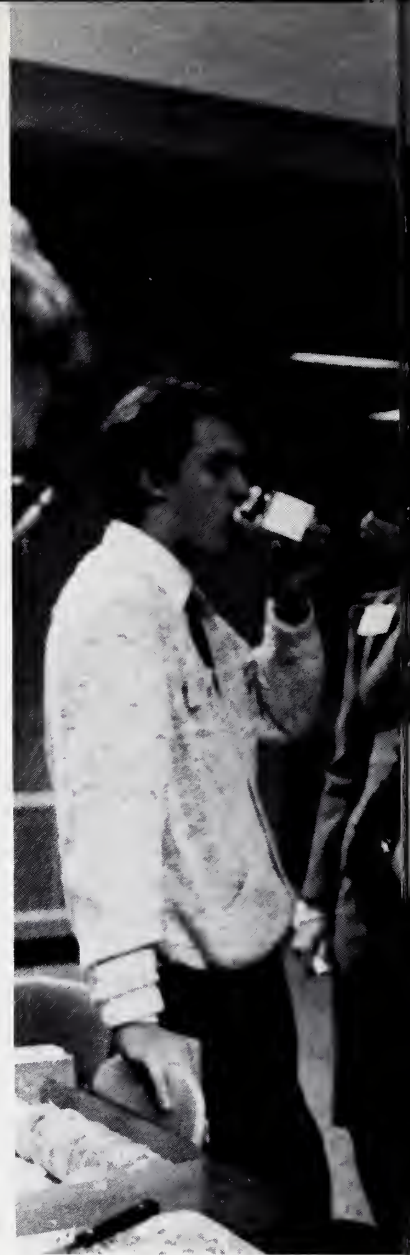

Ben Tryon said, "We didn't do real well, but we were new on the team. We hope to do better next year."

At the local level, the decathlon team won the super quiz.

First competing in January of 1986, the decathlon team qualified for State twice, the first in 1988 and the second in 1990.

"Working with highly motivated students has been a joy for Larry and me," said Sandra Parker, home school advisor. Parker, Nelson, and Larry Lawson, social studies, were academic coaches.

"In the military, when a lieutenant or sergeant enters the room, you are supposed to stand at attention," said Master Sgt. Wilbur Castleberry. "It's a sign of respect for those higher in rank than you."

Not only do ROTC students master respect for themselves and those around them, they also learn about leadership, self-confidence, discipline and most importantly, the meaning of teamwork.

"In our ROTC program, students are taught to rely on teamwork," said Castleberry, "Without it, especially in the armed services, nothing would be accomplished."

Teamwork is crucial in the after-school drill team. This elite team of trained marksmen and women compete against other schools for top marksmanship and military techniques.

"This year we got a chance to travel to Toronto for an overnight drill meet," said Campbell. "It was really a great experience for the students."

Another advantage to joining ROTC is the advanced ranking for students who join the military after graduation from high school.

"A great thing about ROTC is I will get a higher ranking position right from the start," said David Davis, junior. "It also means more money after I complete boot camp."

Hard work is a large factor, but in the long run, those involved look forward to a brighter future.

"The reason why I am in the program is my future in the Marine Corps," said Brian Coss, sophomore.

"You learn things that you couldn't learn in other classes," said Aaron Sorensen, senior.

STUDENTS SHINE

During the Foreign Language Banquet, Ben Davis foreign language teachers honored more than 50 French and Spanish students.

After three consecutive semesters of straight A's in Spanish, students who excelled were inducted into the Spanish Honor Society.

"It's an honor to be inducted," said Junior Brian Martich.

Another new inductee, Junior Angie Hays, said, "I think it's quite an honor and accomplishment to become a member. However, I think that your teachers start to expect a

The Spanish Honor Society, founded in 1950, has been a part of Ben Davis tradition for only seven years.

"The Spanish Honor Society is a way to recognize those students who have achieved excellence in the language," said Spanish teacher Thomas Alsop. Laura Waalkes, Connie Lahr, and Charlene Carmichael also teach Spanish.

Another foreign language tradition is the French Honor Society, sponsored by Laura Geckler. Other French teachers are Bob McKinley and Carmichael.

For the past three years, students achieving straight A's during three semesters of French, as well as an overall B average, are invited to become members.

"It's very impressive to say that you are a member of any Honor Society," said Geckler. "But, colleges are even more impressed when it happens to involve excellence in foreign language."

New member Sophomore Jamie Sides, said, "A lot of people take French. I'm pretty lucky to be accepted."

Rock

A SPECTRUM OF HITS

From Big Daddy Kane to Jimi Hendrix, B-91 has what students are looking for, or better yet, what they're listening to. Taking a walk on the wilder side, two new shows were added to the agenda.

"Baseline," the new, all hip-hop and rap show created and hosted by seniors Chad Brady and Tammy Dean, contrasted the usual rock-n-roll sounds of B91.

"We thought that it would be exciting if we could capture this particular listening audience," said Brady, "It deviates from the style of music that we play normally."

"Rap in the 80's and 90's is what psychedelic music was to the 60's and 70's," said Paul Mendenhall, WBDG Advisor.

On the groovier, far-out side, "Psychadelic Psaturday", hosted by seniors, Dan Bain and Chad Brady, dedicated two entire Saturday afternoons to 60's music.

This line-up included such artists as Jimi Hendrix, Janis Joplin, Sly and the Family Stone and The Doors.

"I'd definately say it was a success," said Bain, "We wanted this show to be special, so we decided just to do it a couple of times, other wise it would become too routine."

"Psychadelic Psaturday tooo" was the follow-up to "Psychadelic Psaturday".

Doing some show stopping on her own, senior Christine Bichette was named the 1990 Best High School Broadcaster of the Year.

"What is so great is, that her sister, Claudine, received the same award in 1988," said Mendenhall, "kinda gives ya chills huh?"

THE ART FORM

From the printing of the Spotlight newspaper every two weeks to the assembling of the school's commencement booklets, the Ben Davis High School's printing classes gave the students the experience and knowledge needed to operate in today's industrial age.

"Before I took the class, I never knew how to operate any of the printing equipment," said Senior Jason Bush.

The interest in printing for several students this year was more of an examination.

"Printing was just something I thought I would try," said Bush.

"I thought it would be a fun class to take," said Junior Bill Lane.

Others such as Junior Arthur Truett decided to continue work in printing. "I plan on going to college to major in printing at either Oregon State or Vincennes University," said Truett.

Bush said, "The class gives students first-hand experience of how it is in the industry."

Sophomore David Jones plans to apply his training from printing class to innovative design in graphic art production for next year's Spotlight. He hopes to use spot color in his artwork and infographs.

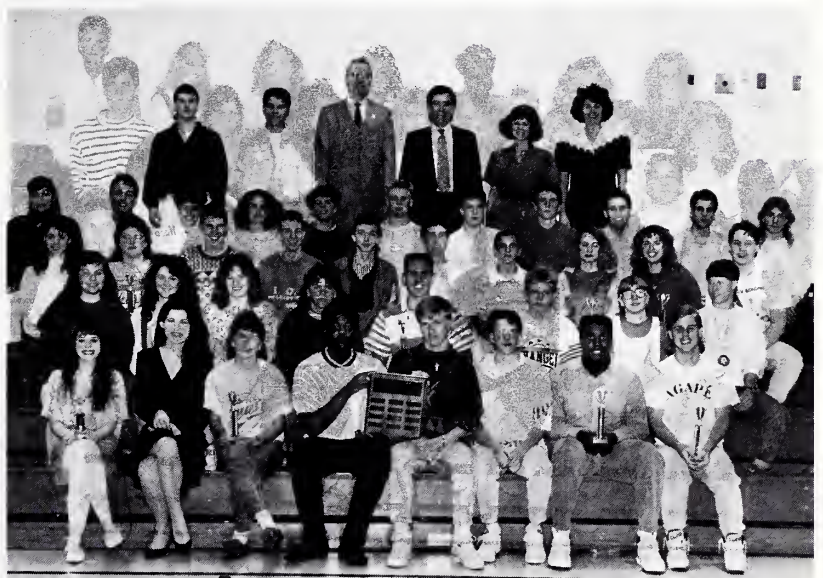

As for the students who have no plans on going on with a career in printing, Bush believes the class has still given them the opportunity to work with different types of printing equipment, as well as experience work in an industrial environment.

READ ABOUT IT

Quill and Scroll is an honorary club for journalism students. The students have to be a junior or senior, be in the top third of their class, and be nominated by the editors of the publications or the advisor.

This year officers were Seniors Julie Piatt, president; Guy Finn, vice president; Laura Swartley, treasurer; Anita Mayer, secretary. Other senior members were Crissy Cook, Tammy Dean, and Jonathan Dworak.

During the publications banquet on May 23, Quill and Scroll inducted new members, 10 juniors and 13 seniors.

Continuing with tradition, senior staff members worked together to organize the program for the banquet. This year a 12-page booklet, designed by Jenifer Yearly, Keyhole design editor, featured senior memories, information on academic accomplishments, and future plans.

Voted by staff members, special recognition awards were presented to 16 outstanding journalists. The highest award, Outstanding Journalist, went to Julie Piatt and Jonathan Dworak for Spotlight, and Jenifer Yearly for Keyhole.

Director's Citation Awards went to Seniors Guy Finn, Janinne Bellamy, Laura Swartley, and Judy Stringer; Most Dedicated to David Holder, Tammy Cleary and Piatt; Most Improved to Brandy McCarthy, Kaye McAnulty, and Scott Burris; Best Attitude to Liz Dixon, Pam Bourne, and Alicia Swanson, and Most Promising Journalist to Sarah Gradek.

Toot!

HERE WE COME

The Ben Davis band has something to beat a couple drums about. Seniors Nathan Black, Laurel Blasik, and Matt Smallwood and Sophomore Jill Pritchard made it to the Indiana All-State Band competition.

Smallwood and Black also competed in a soloist competition at Northwest High School on January 27. As a result of this contest, ten musicians received a Division I superior rating in Group I, which qualified them to perform in the ISSMA State contest February 24.

"Many of the musical selections performed are pieces that are now being played in recitals by collegiate and professional musicians," said Jim Butz, band director.

Professionally speaking, concert band members had the pleasure of playing with professional trumpet soloist, Larry McWilliams. Also, the band was invited to perform in the "Tournament of Roses" in Pasadena, California, in 1991.

"This is such a treat and an honor for the students," said Butz. "They've been waiting a long time for something this special to happen to them."

"The trip to the 'Tournament of Roses' is going to be very special to me, because it's during my senior year," said Paul Thomas, junior.

Although, the State title was not captured, the BD band continued its tradition of excellence by winning numerous competitions and lots of recognition.

"I'm really pleased about this year. We've had a lot of exciting times," said Butz.

"Next year will be even greater," said Thomas. "We're getting some new instruments."

CANDYLAND

Selling candy is a daily fund raising project for organizations at Ben Davis. With a new group assigned every two weeks, students participating in more than one club frequently tire of carrying the bags of chocolate.

In addition to members carrying bags of candy for one or more of the 28 clubs, teachers often helped increase profits.

Before school, students could count on Larry Highbaugh to sell candy from a cart to earn money for debate boosters. If on second floor, students watched for "Doc" Voris with his box of candy.

"I sold candy just about everytime I was offered, not only to earn money for the club (DECA), but also because I got hungry during the day. It was there to munch on," said Kelly Latimore, senior.

Some students who took candy, then gave it to their parents to take to work and sell.

"I sometimes just gave the bag of candy to my mom and she took it to work and sold it for me," said Chris Brown, senior. "It sold much faster that way."

"I usually ended up eating most of the candy myself, then the replacement money came out of my own pocket," said Jeff Miner, senior.

Whether eating the candy, then having to use other funds to pay for it later, or giving it to willing parents to sell, the profits helped defray expenses for special trips, awards, club supplies, and special activities.

EXPRESS YOURSELF

The Internationales' yearly trip will be hosted in New York City this year.

"This type of a trip takes a lot of time, preparation, and most of all money," said Marie Thompson, sophomore.

They will be leaving for New York during the spring break in March 1991. In order to raise the money to go, they had a car wash on May 19 at the Tenth Street Fire Station.

"Even though it was a dreary day, some of us were able to earn $12 for our account," said LaTonia Perry, junior.

"Having a fundraiser for this type of event is very important because everyone in the group does not have a job; therefore, it makes it easier for each person to get the money that is necessary to participate," said Patty Schaefer, choir.

Throughout the fall, the choir plans to sell Entertainment '91 books and candy to raise the rest of their money.

Junior Jamie Ashley, Internationales, sees the trip as a culture expedition.

"By going to New York, we will have the opportunity to gain a wider perspective on different types of cultures and ethnic groups. Hopefully, we will have many memorable experiences with the other choirs that will bring us closer together as a group," said Ashley.

The choir will be singing at the Statue of Liberty Plaza and in Philadelphia with various choirs from all around the nation.

"Last year the choir traveled to Florida and it was a wonderful experience," said Kellie Smith. "I am sure that the next group will look forward to visiting the Big Apple."

Wow!

THE SOUND OF MUSIC

Starting the school year with high expectations, the Ben Davis choirs opened this year's roster of performances with junior high convocations in October.

Maintaining personal goals was balanced with working together as a group. "In a choir, you just can't afford to try and stand out, to be in the limelight," said Junior Kim Fisher.

Junior Neal Crisp said, "If the choir is working right, you're working as a whole."

Performers handle the dilemma of pre-concert nerves in different ways.

"I get nervous before I go out and perform, but I usually take in a deep breath and try to keep my mind off of it," said Junior John Twa.

Crisp added, "Although I may be nervous before the concert, the energy from the audience replaces my fears."

Looking back to the beginning of the year, choir members relate to how they changed in some way.

"I really tried hard to get into the Madrigals," said Fisher. "Now, from choir, I understand music more."

Twa added, "I really didn't know a lot about it in the beginning, but learned, and now am looking forward to going on to a leadership role next year, and helping the juniors."

Combined performances of the eight choral groups were presented during Christmas and spring concerts. In addition, the majority of the groups performed at the junior highs. Different from the major concerts, the choirs performed as individual groups.

"Of the three choirs I am in, working on, and performing Madrigal music was the most challenging and rewarding."

be special.

Dave's Lady

The Squad,
Westside Ice Capades are in the house!

Jenn

Kam-trak, Shane-train, Steph E-G, Karr-
E, & Chris-D,
Remember Homecoming, Downtown,
Depot, Passion, Naughty Girls, Westside
Ice, Ice House, & Westside Ice Capades.
Jenster

Dione,
To the bestest friend in the galaxy! Just remember all the fun times & may the floss be with you.

Michele

Jeremy,
I'll never forget June 15, 1989.
P.S. blond?

Pam

Ruthless "WIB's" - Jenster, Shain-train,
Chris-T, Karr-E, and Steph-E-G, Downtown, track, and Purple P. - Life is "too short" - I love you!

Kam-trak

"K.O." Tony Jones,
Somebody loves you. You'll always be in "trouble". I promise! X's, O's, and you know!

Your Kam-lady

Kama, Shane, Karrie, Stephanie, Shannon, Christy,
Thanks for all the great memories girls!
Me

Laural

Jenni P., April C., Anne P., Sarah C.,
Mike W.,
Can you believe it? This is it. The times we've spent together are unforgettable.
Even though we are going separate ways my thoughts will always be filled with joyful memories. For 3 years you have been my life - I want to thank you. May success smile on all of you. I love you!
I'll never forget -

Laural

Teresa Rakes,
You're the greatest! Thanks for always being there when I needed to talk. Bestest Friends Forever!!

Christine,
You're the greatest! I can't believe our senior year is over. Remember the best
- Party Waterfront, and the men! Go
Purdue - Love ya lots.

Dana

Julie,
Thanks for everything. What am I going to do without you next year? Don't worry, he'll come back for ya. See you at the P.G.A.!

Dana

Melissa, Dana, Jennifer, & Julie, Thanks for sticking with me when I need you! You're the best friends anyone could ever have. When we've all gone our separate ways, don't forget the times we've shared. I love you guys!

Christine

Chris Wheat,
I think we've been through it all. Thanks for the fun, the love, and all the memories. I hope forever really means forever.

Lots of love,
Kimberly McNeil

Richie McClellan,
I will ALWAYS love you.

Love,
Kim

Shane-train, Kam-trak, Karr-E, Jennoter,

Don't forget all those fun times we've had. Downtown, the Track, Rob Base, and the Ice House. The Squad rules.

Steph-E-G

Sherman,
You're a real sweetheart! Good luck in everything!

DeeDee

Kratoska,
You will always be my bestest friend forever!

King

Laura H.,
I wish our friendship was as close as it once was, but you'll always be my friend.

Jenny K.

Malinda Siders,
I'll never forget how good of a friend you are.

Jenny K.

Deanna,
To my best friend and maybe someday my cousin, I'll always remember the good and bad times we've shared.

Jenny K.

The Noble Romans Crew,
You know who you are! Thanks for the memories. Let's keep in touch!

Love ya all,
Laura S.

Julie, Barb, Laura, Jinaki, Angie, Anita,
Tanya, JiSung, and Jennifer,
Thanks for very so nice to the new girl a few years ago! We've had so much fun!

Love ya,
Laura S.

Jennifer,
I'm really glad we have become so close this year! I'm always here for you. I hope our friendship lasts over the year to come.

Lisa (Blondie)

What we've got

The end of the year brings some renewal and some losses. George Dickerson, vice principal of night school, retired after being a part of Wayne Township for 15 years. Six of the 15 years were spent exclusively at BD.

"It's amazing, the amount of people outside of Ben Davis who comment on what an extraordinary school it is," said Dickerson. "I attribute that to the students." Dickerson also presented the Ben Davis High School Faculty Scholarship to co-valedictorians T. J. Tyson and Jonathan Dworak during the "Evening of Excellence."

Next year, Pete Toon, current vice principal of the Senior Class, will replace Dickerson. Tom Corwin, math chairperson, was named to replace Toon.

Bruce Hamman, English, and Kenny Cox, health teacher, also retired. During 15 years at Ben Davis, Hamman coached football and girls tennis. Also a coach, Cox spent 35 years teaching at BD, and was the baseball coach 27 of the 35 years. "This year has been really nice," said Cox. "It's just too bad that students don't care about their grades as much as they did in 1955!"

Students who did care about grades and success this year were honored at the second annual Evening of Excellence.

Recognizing the importance of recycling, at the end of the year students began saving the earth by emptying the contents of their lockers into cardboard boxes around the building.

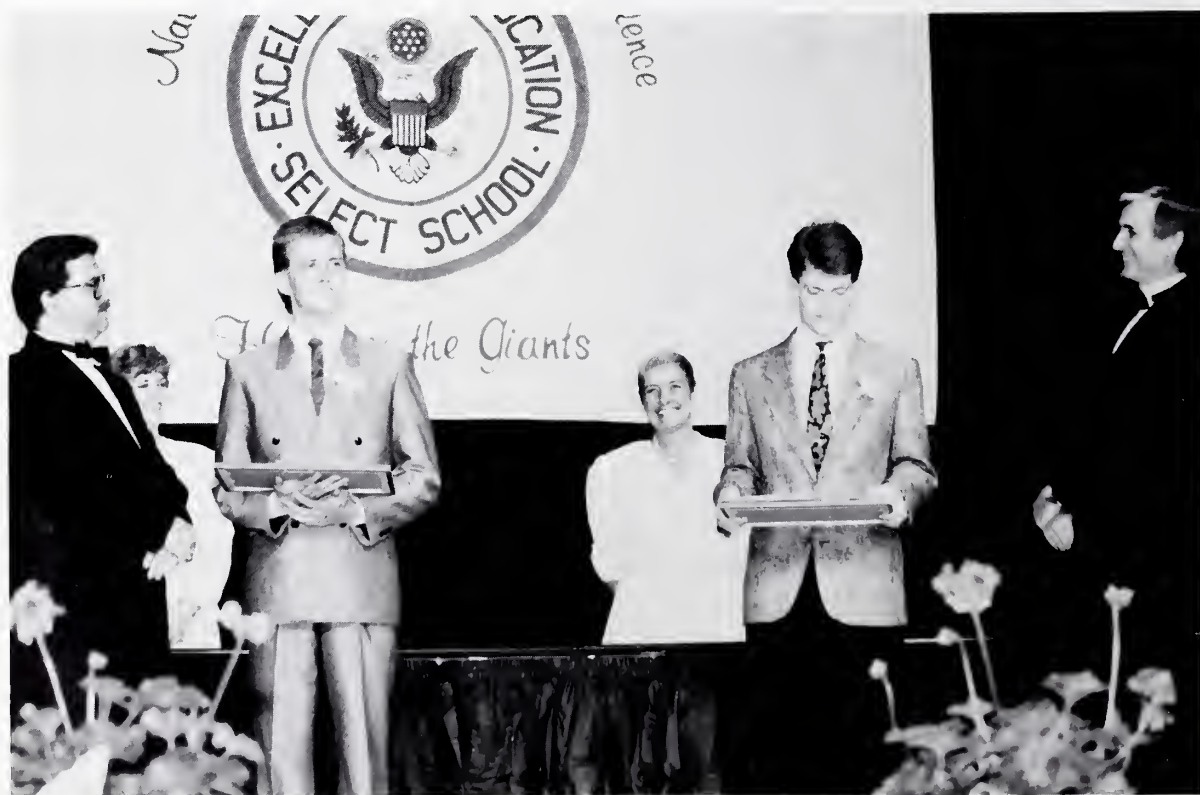

"At first I thought that those boxes were trash cans, so I put my gum wrappers and coke cans in them, by accident," said Sophomore Jason Bourne. "After all, we're trying to conserve aluminum. Why not kill two birds with one stone?"

Epilogue

Looking back on exactly "What We've Got," we can list an abundance of neverending qualities. The work invested in this book is phenomenal, not to mention the hours! It's surprising the same sanity is still intact, but all the hard work and long hours are ALL worth it when the product of all the work endured is 280 pages of memories to last a lifetime. We're proud to say: what you see is what we've done, all by ourselves, all just for you. Of course, all this would never have been possible without the cooperation and support of the Ben Davis faculty, administration, and office personnel. John Schwegman and English teachers made it possible for us to take 1500 underclassmen photographs in two days and sell yearbooks one week during classes. Special thanks to teachers who sent a student with the welcomed tip, "In case your interested in a picture..." Thank you Dick Mauer, our humorous Josten's representative (love that car phone!), and Fred Vargo, the sports picture guy. Thanks too, Linda Mock (who made our bulletin boards beautiful with all your poster paper!) We love our extra desks, thanks to "Buff" and Bob Britt, and our light table built by Mike England and Lars Rascoe. For keeping the lists, messages, photo passes, and money reports coming, thanks to Mary Ann Williams, Rosie Phelps, Betty White, Shirley Wilbur, Teresa Maxson, and Kay Radtke. Special photo thanks to Steve Lata and Mike Merrill of Prestige and to James Paino for the guard photo. Special final deadline thanks to students who weren't on staff, but stayed after school to help us: Jenni Caldwell, Allen Long, Jason Bourne, Jeremy Price, Flisha Biesel. Last, but definitely not least, the guy who really sees it ALL—Roger Bentley, who cleans up after the brain-storm has passed. Extra special thanks to the people who make this book possible, YOU, the students. Without you, we wouldn't know
